Thread: Most memorable Moment When In Grades 1-5

Proxies.tv - October 4, 2020, 10:28 am

What was your most memorable moment when you were in grade school?

I remember when I was in the 1st grade I had this crush on a girl. Her name was Vanessa and to this day I'll never forget the experience. She was very popular and someone I considered out of my league. So I made her a ring out of string because it was the only thing I could think of to give her to get her attention. To my surprise she wore that string as a ring for the rest of the school day and then we started chasing each other around the play ground at school for the next few weeks. Throughout my life I've never forgotten how simple things were back in those days.

I wrote a note to my crush in 2/3rd grade and she accepted, we dated, but never actually did anything! Nowadays I only get turned on by asians, so I would never date her anyway

I will never forget it man, I used to cycle next to her house, just to leave a love letter in their mailbox, proper cringe, but she loved it xD

You just reminded me of how we used to love passing notes in school. Ah the memories.....

Not the most memorable experience, but in 1st grade we use to have to line up boys on one side of the door, girls on other. So this one day I'm first in line. I'm happy as hell because that's more play time in restroom, lol. Most of the other kids are talking so the teacher isn't letting us go right out. As she tries to get the other kids quiet, she slams the damn door and there goes the tip of my pinky finger. Pretty wild experience, the level of panic was unreal lol. I'm often reminded of this when I wash my hands.

I still think that was the best time of my life. Discovering the real world for the first time.

Truly its not the same as the beginning. The loss of innocence comes entirely too fast.

Once you have lost your innocence, the world suddenly becomes a bit more grey, from my point of view.

Yeah, for sure, there are a few memories, family, friends, moments....but times when there was no stigma or deeper meanings and complexities attached...it's special...we spent every break time together, walked to and from school together and hung out at weekends...was innocent, but special....even magical :)

I hit someone in the head going down the slide and the yard duty asked if it was on accident or on purpose and I didn't know the difference, so I said on purpose. Granted this was in kinder but I finally learned what it meant after this experience happened.

When a girl from my class in 5-6th grade admitted she have had a crush on me for many years and my mind was blown. Didn't see it coming nor did I know how to react.

When I was in grade 4 I had a crush of a transferee student. Her nickname is Denden. She is my first crush <3. Then in grade 5 she transferred again to another school.

I wouldn't say I have any fond memories of my Grades 1 to 5.

My grandfather bought me a new bicycle. When I saw that, I was surprised. I still remember that moment.

Mr. Atlas - October 6, 2020, 5:49 pm when I was 15/16 years old (4/5 or even 6 years ago maybe?)

I had 2 girlfriends at the same time one day we went to the pool together
I kissed both at the same time it was so beautiful and simple

Today with all this feminist shit it's getting dangerous to say hello to a woman in the street wtf

The most memorable thing that happened on me when I was on grade 5 wherein I always gets on top of the class specially on Math :D

There was this girl names Alexis, Alexis Eddy. Look her up. She was perfection in all ways. She had a thing for me, I had a thing for her. But we never brought it to fruition... She was all the things you want in a girl and I was just a normal dude. She always had a secret thing for me and I always did for her, we both made it known to eachother. Eventually, I moved away due to family issues at home (across the country). We always kept in touch every few years. Met back and forth, nothing intimate. Eventually, she overdosed on Heroin due to depression. I regret it to this day that I never brought myself to her intimately because it could have saved her life. She was everything I ever wanted and needed and now she's gone. I still dream of her to this day... I think to myself that she is watching over me in some way but I can never be too sure. Sometimes I just wish I could see her again but I guess that day wont come again. I was such an idiot I never even attended the funeral because of my current relationship shunning me in doing so. Note to all people growing up: Go with that gut feeling. For the love of fucking God... Do NOT meet that status quo.

The most memorable moment when I was on grade school is when my classmate poops on the corridor. His poop just fell on the floor from his pants and everyone was staring at the poop saying, "who's poop is that? Eew" :D

Dule74 - October 7, 2020, 1:21 am

During class, we were getting a bunch of paper balls. When the class was over and the teacher went to the teachers lounge, we went to the hallway and bathrooms and had a boys vs girls paper ball war.

I loved school when I was young, the first thing that came into my mind is that we used to play these fighting games, we would actually go ham on eachother, throwing each other around and would be all fine with it. Kids are fucking stupid. I'm glad nobody got hurt badly when we played.

Cooligan - October 7, 2020, 1:24 am

The "girlfriend" I had in 3rd grade; it started a lifelong journey of knowing each other, and was the foundation to our high school relationship that brings some of the best memories to mind when thinking about.

Damn, it's 4AM and I'm feeling nostalgic as fuck.

I remember the time when I was in highschool and I was the opposite of yours. I am always the last in line. Because being a tall guy at my age gives me the disadvantage of being the last in line as always. Not exactly the last in line to be honest but 2nd to last instead.
