"Colombia is the second happiest country on the planet, according to a survey of happiness, hope and economic optimism conducted by pollster Gallup. The South American country accumulated 87 points, coming in behind Fiji on 92 points while the Philippines was ranked in third with 84 points."

The colombians are the happiest in the world.

Also they are happy af. They must have abnormal amounts of the good chemicals on the brain.

They are not happy just because they are so dam good looking.

If you go to Russia or Ukraine the people also look good. but you see how they are depressed and unfriendly most of them are rude.

On the flip side of that Colombian people are friendly, easy going, happy and look good.

There is something on their brain that is different from our brain.

cause they grow up in poverty. duh

if you grow up there your expectations are low.

colombia isnt only place like this.

I think it has more to do with their brain chemistry .

Maybe their brain naturally produce cocaine?

maybe because their country was in civil war for years? he rediscovers peace ... they have lived the worst now that it is calm they have the right and the chance to be able to benefit from it

I hope it lasted for them

It's not because of that. The human mind rather quick tend to take things for granted and forget about the past.

I continue to believe that it has to do with their brain. We tend to measure only appearance compare to other countries.

Some countries have different physical attributes it just make sense that some of them will have a different brain chemistry.

Their 5-HT receptors/dopamine receptor just work more optimally.

And if you could be one day as a Colombian person body you might be blown away by happiness.

You would need an actual study to see if their brain is different.

shakur123 - October 12, 2020, 8:54 am

Maybe theres other factors like weather?? Russia is cold af and colombia has good sunny weather. Or maybe food, colombia is known for their great cofee and other great dishes.
