Thread: Speed up transaction for bitcoin

Geass - October 12, 2020, 11:01 am

I need to get a confirmation for a blockchain transaction, how can i do that?

I know its possible if I pay a fee extra, the fee got high and I need to get confirm one transaction.

I never used but here is a tool on this site that may help you.

You can't do anything about it.

Double spend is risky.

Semmenial paid me $150usd or something once and the time of day recommended 5 sat, took a few days if I recall but I still got it.

Rebroadcasting might not work.

Best to look on mempool.space and look up your transaction in the que.

I was going crazy about that shit.

Depending on hiw low you did it, expect 2-7 days

I add regular fee, but not miners are high and 10 minutes after it got $300 more the value of bitcoin

I once did a low custom fee instead of regular and it took 6 days. Felt pretty bad about it but I'll just wait it down from now on.

How much low?

Like $0.06 USD I think? It wanted me to spend $2.5 for a $10 transaction which I refused, so I tried a low custom fee for the first time to see how long it would take.

If your transaction doesn't get confirmed because you choose very low transaction fees (e.g. 3 sats/byte), your transaction will most likely not confirm and be deleted when the next memepool "cleaning event" takes place (Happens approximately every two weeks).

If it's an important transaction, you could try to use a transaction accelerator.

Use <https://mempool.space/>

Don't use BlockChain.

Find a nice segwit wallet, save a ton of fees. What OS are you using?

I've found bitcoinfees.net really good for working out appropriate fees. You can bump transaction fees on certain wallets like electrum also.

here you go

I tried this once and I think it did make the transaction run a bit faster.

If your question means any "free" way to have a slow transaction pushed, I don't really think accelerators do much really :shrug:
