Thread: I found a diamond ring in a underwater cave and returned it

Who Soup - October 13, 2020, 6:17 pm

I was doing a biological survey at a popular beach that's normally closed because of the pandemic and I ended up finding a gold/diamond ring buried deep in an underwater cave. It was in around 40' of water and went in at least 15' - 20' which is where I found it. I brought it to the lost and found staff and they looked in their database and were able to find the guy almost immediately. We talked to him on the phone and it turns out to be his wedding ring that he lost while he was there on a trip 1 full year ago.

MarvinMalware - October 13, 2020, 8:51 pm

That's quite impressive, a lot of people would have done the greedy move of taking it for themselves. Hopefully your good karma returns itself.

He was pretty blown away, he definitely didn't think he'd ever find it again.

Name of the couple and a date engraved on the ring and a post in the group from a woman about a lost ring 1 day before I found it. When we met, her husband had exactly the same ring, so I knew it was theirs.

this was a pretty touristy spot, I think their lost and found had some sort of database for people who lost items. I got a photo of them when they bought it so it's pretty much 100% theirs.

Hackoo - December 17, 2020, 1:42 am

Very nice ring , you should Wear it and you becomes a hidden person as soon as possible :D like the movie "The Lord of Rings"

Juoku - December 17, 2020, 1:47 am

Mr. Corleone - December 17, 2020, 2:22 am
