

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: What's the first skill you've learned

linkinpork - October 14, 2020, 8:00 pm

What's the first hacking skill you've learned?

Mine, isn't exactly a skill. When I first discovered GHDB I snipped together different dorks until I got one that showed me security cams.

Those were the days when Watch_Dogs first came out so I flipped.

What's the first hacker-related "skill" you've got?

Dolla$ - October 15, 2020, 3:08 am

Use to learn SE by doubling money on Runescape back in the days. x)

tsuki - October 15, 2020, 4:44 am

(Oct 15, 2020 03:08 AM)H1tCat Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Use to learn SE by doubling money on Runescape back in the days. x)

I remember those days.

Trimming armor as well or "selling gf".

Dolla$ - October 15, 2020, 7:49 am

(Oct 15, 2020 04:44 AM)tsuki Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I remember those days.

Trimming armor as well or "selling gf".
ahahah that's my bro

Jetty - October 15, 2020, 11:10 pm

Good old Inspect Element ;)

Yen2 - October 31, 2020, 5:12 pm

The first memory of something I remember was wanting to get admin access to one of the school computers that had AD on it, figure out the old osk to cmd trick and have been using it ever since :D

Ampere - November 1, 2020, 8:35 am

Using TamperMonkey to get Dominos pizza orders for $0.01. That was pretty fun.

Ra - November 13, 2020, 4:40 am

AppleScript "pranks" and bit later WEP wifi cracking

Noodlez_ - November 13, 2020, 2:32 pm

I google dorked e-commerce site databases and changed the PayPal address to mine.

mutate - November 13, 2020, 3:12 pm

Writing malware. Simple scripts. Rabbits, logic bombs, memory eaters, etc.

1337ITWizKid - November 15, 2020, 7:19 pm

Not a hacking skill, but a social engineering skill- I learned how to e-whore first.

tux1 - November 16, 2020, 10:45 am

I think the first skill I learnt was either writing scripts in bat to prank people or using cheat engine to hack games, good times.

guardian - January 3, 2021, 5:08 am probably some kali tools, first language was python and also working with VMs

bubbl3gum - January 3, 2021, 5:45 am

it probably is using virtual machines

was blown away by the fact i could use windows inside windows

good old days

2xTheTap115 - January 3, 2021, 8:18 am

My first hacking skill was extracting hashed passwords from windows and cracking them using the already archaic SAMInside program.

That was before the times when I got to know the power of unix-like systems?

Kriptik - January 3, 2021, 12:08 pm

I started with SQL-Injection, I would go on Google and search for vulnerable websites trying to extract data from the database. I succeeded on several occasions and at some point I got access to the database of an airline company located in India, there was a BUNCH of data. But I panicked, I thought I might get caught and just left it alone.

Now I'm more interested into programming, I don't want to get into being a hacker. The reason is because it's tough and also I'm a very curious person I might get myself into trouble with all that kind of knowledge.

BlackEmpress - January 4, 2021, 7:13 am

Think the first thing I learned was Reflected XSS. Either that or Blind SQLi.

kuebiko - January 6, 2021, 11:00 pm

I'd be mad cause someone killed me/shit talked me in a video game so I picked up doxing pretty quick haha.

spade666 - January 7, 2021, 1:53 am

How to stress networks and web servers using booters. Pretty skiddish, and not really a skill. Also how to use web shells to backdoor websites

Shadow_Hacks - January 7, 2021, 2:25 am

(Oct 14, 2020 08:00 PM)linkinpork Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) What's the first hacking skill you've learned?

Mine, isn't exactly a skill. When I first discovered GHDB I snipped together different dorks until I got one that showed me security cams.

Those were the days when Watch_Dogs first came out so I flipped.

What's the first hacker-related "skill" you've got?

First thing I learned in terms of hacking was phishing using cloaked URL through .tk which was stupid but successful at the time. Gaming wise I started with Black Ops (xbox 360), and was one hell of a sniper and had many people threaten to DDoS me, but they never succeeded so I just did it to them instead.

Madokain - January 25, 2021, 11:52 am

Not really a skill, but i used to grab ips from users on teamspeak since i had the priv to see the actual ip, and then boot them off.

Goatse - January 25, 2021, 1:41 pm

What's the first hacking skill you've learned?

Nothing. Literally nothing. All of the courses cost money

DeAuth - January 27, 2021, 6:02 pm

haha this post takes me back, my first hacking skill was wifi hacking, hence my name, i still remember thinking i was a pro after booting kali linux on my usb and using aircrack-ng to hack my neighbors wifi (even though i couldn't even crack the hash lul) good times

hazmat_rex - January 27, 2021, 7:22 pm

Hmmm...I think HTML was my first actual useful skill for hacking, but for actual "hacking skills", learned the normal tools (nmap, wireshark, john, meta, etc..) and basic networking protocols.

MEXploit - January 29, 2021, 7:39 am using cmd. Lol i would shutdown kids computers whenever we were taking a test on the computer lab. I felt so much power as a kid. LOL

JustHereToBuy - January 30, 2021, 4:25 am

Probably SMTP Flooding, I was picking up on Visual Basic around 2007, and I remember abusing timers, and loops regarding code intended for "sendmail" functionality. Then I learned about SMS gateways and started flooding phones to all hell.