Thread: Paid group to watch me take a brand from 0 to 6 figures?

znc - October 16, 2020, 9:41 am

For those who don't know me (probably most if not all of you), I am an entrepreneur with multiple E-Commerce brands. I have slowed down over the past year or so, as I had many complications. I have previously taken brands from 0 to 6 figures in a single month multiple times (if you go back in my threads, you can see proof of this).

Anyway, I have a new project I'm going to be launching within the next month or two. I'll take it to 6+ figures within the first few months of doing so. I'm confident in this, but if not, I would move onto another idea.

Should I launch a paid group (wouldn't be too expensive, not sure of pricing but no more than a few hundred, potentially less) where I document the entire process and help others learn to build a brand?

I would likely record videos of the process and me explaining each step, but sometimes they'd be text-based as I'm very busy.

I'd host it over Discord.

If I do not hit my 6 figure goal with the brand within a few months, I would start a new project and continue doing so until I get a brand to 6 figures from scratch. I know I can do this within my first or second attempt, but for customers safety, I would offer a refund guarantee of some sort.

Members would be REQUIRED to sign an NDA so that my exact process and brand ideas are not copied and acted upon by members.

Would this interest anyone? I want to see if this would have any demand, as it is something I am very interested in doing.

No, I do not dropship. I will be using US based suppliers for my brand, however, members can go whichever route they please. I never use cloakers within FB ads and never have, however, it will be heavily social media promotion based over FB ads for a while.

FB without a cloaker at all? I'm slightly interested. Free trial model?

This has nothing to do with mentoring. I would be answering questions, but the focus is a documented process from A-Z of the brand being built. I am debating on using Click Funnels or Shopify as of now, but it isn't dropshipping.

I have 0 experience with cloakers and never have had to use one, even within my dropshipping brands. I've moved on from dropshipping, though. I hold inventory for my brands or have a fulfillment service holding inventory I've already purchased.

I would potentially offer free trials to some members, but an NDA would still be required. I haven't thought about any specifics such as free trials yet though, just debating on doing this or not.

I don't know if this was before or after I created a new Discord account (and tried to contact everyone about it), but you should have contacted me there if after. All previous members have either gotten their refund, were completely satisfied with the service, OR never contacted me (and probably charged back with their bank). That's long gone now, but if I do decide to create this group, any past mentorship members who were not satisfied and not refunded would be allowed in for free.

I will try to remember to contact you, but be on the look out for a thread in the next few weeks if I do decide to act upon this. I'm not sure if I will, though. I might just document it all and release it on YouTube in a year or so for free. The only negative is that that'd need to be done after the brand is already where I want it to be so that I don't create tons of competitors for myself.

1) Nowhere near 20 people charged back with their bank. Those who didn't contact me on my new Discord did. The rest were satisfied.

2) I have you on my ignore list because you post shit like this on like all of my threads in the past. I'd rather not see your replies than argue with the most brainless student I've ever had. You claim you were scammed, yet when I was mentoring you, I spent more time answering your INSANELY redundant questions than any other student. Literally had to screen share for the most basic things like duplicating an ad. Then, you don't contact me, and chargeback. What do you expect, me to work with you after you took your money back without contacting me? Lol.

Why would you launch a paid group if you're capable of making 6 figures income within a month? That doesn't make any sense, does it?

That's like asking why business YouTubers make YouTube videos. 6 figures revenue also doesn't mean income - I've never made 6 figures/month off of a brand, although I have hit 6 figures/month in revenue.

My whole plan behind documenting the process is to upload it to YouTube in a year or so when my brand is already solidified in it's niche. I just thought that a group with NDA/NCs behind it would be beneficial for others and keep me dedicated to working hard on the brand and content. I believe I am going to do it regardless and let a lot of my old friends I've met online in for free to help them out and also be held accountable to create quality content and stay on top of things.

I don't think I'll be selling access here on HF since my reputation seems a bit tarnished from some BS a bit out of my control in the past. I'll likely just let a few people I've met on here in the group for free along with those I mentioned previously, and might offer cheap slots to others in another community I'm in just to give people I haven't yet met the opportunity to join.

(Oct 16, 2020 06:27 PM)Zoomers Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) How much would it cost just to look lol, I may be interested always looking to watch

If I go through with this, the content will be released for free on YouTube in the future (likely a year+). I don't think I'll be selling access here due to what I explained above. I may still consider, but I'm thinking more-so of a monthly plan that's much cheaper than having to put up a couple hundred up-front instead. Should make customers feel much safer, be a much easier barrier of entry, and so forth.

No, that's like asking why Jezz Bezos would hold mentoring (or type in his paid group) for like 3-5% of his earnings. That's a pure waste of his time to do that. As you've said, it wouldn't be priced too much, a couple of hundred dollars, and anything beyond that doesn't have a target audience on HF (most of the time) so your earnings would be like a small percentage of what you make as the net income. So why would you waste your time with that if you're earning very good?

If you wanna do it properly, then it would require quite some time to teach those people. Judging by the replies above, some had a wild ride with you in your previous journeys.

Also, this isn't anything personal, please don't take it as that.

Mister Slyther - October 18, 2020, 4:16 am

Goodluck - hard to have any confidence in stuff like this because of the replies on your thread + thousands of other members selling eBooks claiming MAKE $500 A DAY. It's all lies and scams. Why would anyone even bother wasting teaching someone or selling their so called guide when you make $30,000 A DAY with a so called eBook that a user wrote.

The mindsets of users on forums like HF are atrocious, at least many of them. Their aspirations are based on fraudulent behaviour and scamming other users who are trying to make something out of their life, yet people are easily to manipulate and mind-control through a few words. The amount of dishonesty is ridiculous, and the lack of self-respect is unreal. But really, this is the internet and the online web, can't expect much. Only a small percentage are actually decent people.

The disputes forum section speaks for itself, and the resentment in peoples replies on various threads is enough. Anything close to professional, you will find outside HF (in the real world) and a very few members on this forum who are actually intelligent, and have positive motives that are based on promoting their services for a sustainable living.

Do you see what I am saying here? in a nutshell, a large number of users on this forum are simply wearing masks with disgusting motives behind them. Nonetheless, I really don't know you so don't take this personal, this is just a public statement I am making on a thread to bring awareness to an obvious and a existing problem.

Agreed.

Why would you even bother with doing something like this just for a small percentage of earnings? it isn't logical. You're already earning very well for a living, so why bother?

That analogy is terrible. Even if I was making 6 figures a month in profit (which I am not), that would only be a bit over a million dollars per year. Many YouTubers make this with their ventures that they vlog about. I don't think Elon Musk is making a million a year.

Anyway, as I said previously, I plan on documenting it regardless to release on YouTube in a year or so. Starting a community charging a small price monthly would keep me on top of creating quality content, help me network with people, and if I grow it to a few hundred members, it can make me thousands a month which is another great source of income regardless of my income.

I understand your argument, but it doesn't really apply to me. I don't make 6 figures a month in profit. I have a fair bit of free time.

The point of the group would not be to mentor the people and teach them everything. It would be to post exactly what I'm doing, share my brand, my thought process behind each step, and so forth. Should people copy my exact process? No. Can they learn a lot from it? Definitely. Also, I would be sharing my actual brand, website, social medias, etc. There would be no way to lie about growth, and if I were to, it'd be obvious. Members would opt out of the monthly payment, leave the community, and expose me for lying. I would even include a refund guarantee if such things happened, and if I was to not follow my own rules, it would make it easy for them to chargeback.

That's just my thought process behind why this is a good idea for me, why it should be a good idea and low risk for customers, and so forth.

I'm not vouching / even acknowledging OP but I've never understood this argument. (not talking about scam groups / forex shit)

If you are good at dropshipping / crypto trading / whatever and have the earnings to back it up (real earnings, not fake forex shit) why would you not create a course/group to make more money?

Let's say you do $300k/month on your dropshipping store, around 20% profit margin. That's $60,000/month profit, if you can create a course with ACTUAL value and sell it for say... $499. Now it's hard to say how many units you'd sell because it depends on your personal following, let's say you have a pretty small following, you can probably sell 10 units a week since you have the earnings to back it up, that's $4990/week (lets just round to $5k), so around $20k/month in profit, completely autopilot, no need to manage ads for the course, or figure out inventory issues etc.. it just sits there and makes you money when you advertise it.

To add around 35% ontop of your current monthly income for basically no continuous work is a no-brainer. (I've seen people make $500k+/month just off their courses)

Paid groups are just the same, I personally know people making high 5 figures every single month from running paid groups mentoring things they themselves make a lot of money from

Yeah +1 to this really, (don't know or support op either lmao, from what I can see this is an awful thing to buy from him) masterminds/paid courses of any sorts have proven to be an extremely lucrative supplement to your normal consistent income. Making the course will maybe take a few weeks to create and manage (which can be outsourced for the most part and normally is) and then you can sell that same product for a long time and continue to make a high return on it with minimal outgoings (adspend, hosting and customer support is probably the main 3).

Because most people that are very successful in something don't make courses about that, they don't waste time on that. They try to enlarge their own business in some way instead of making a course. I'm not saying everyone who makes a course is a con or not providing any value. However, we've seen countless times how mentorships and courses from "real entrepreneurs" turn out here (not pointing any fingers) and generally on the internet.
