A website I used to use got shut down ages ago. Does anybody know where I can get website database leaks? Thanks and sorry if this is the wrong topic to post.

Only one I've found is raid forums. Lots of DBs cost money but usually only €10 or so Dehashed is the only one that's barely legal.

RaidForums and Dehashed are good sources. WeLeakInfo and PwnDB are also good to search through.

Dehashed is about the only one that would be worth using.

If you don't need to search for that long, just write down everything you want to search, and get a trial account.

That way, you don't have to fork over more money just for a day or two worth of searching.

I think it's like 0.05¢ per API search. Government or Law Enforcement gets free API access though.

Just finished a week subscription with LeakPeek. Seemed very solid, but can't compare to others as its the only one I have used.

Leakpeak somehow has access to combolists or breaches that you can't find anywhere else. Dehashed and Intelx(dot)io are good too, and you can get a free full plain text passwords on Intelx(dot)io, but Leakpeek has been the most comprehensive in my experience

Good to know.

Was going to explore one of the other paid services next time I needed to do a lookup, but might just get another extension on LeakPeek when I need it.
