Thread: HF Mobile App Teaser

Omniscient - October 18, 2020, 11:17 am

You might have noticed that for the past month HF has not had many feature updates. That's because our main focus has been building a native App for HF. We will be releasing a beta within the next couple weeks both an Android and iOS store app.

The focus of the app at first is going to be notifications and Convo. Without an actual app on the iOS we can't do notifications thus we are forced to make at least that app. And we love Convo and want more users to adapt it as their main communication method of HF.

Here are some screenshots of the app. These are still works in progress but it teases you with what's coming.

Large images....

Angela White - October 18, 2020, 11:18 am being able to use the convos like this is going to change the marketplace game for HF, especially if we'll be able to get notifications for convo messages & pms & contracts and such i'm super excited, like, actually.

amazing job to both you and xerotic

Zero - October 18, 2020, 11:19 am

This is going to be amazing to use on a daily basis!

Thanks!

That's what we hope. Currently our mobile device usage is low for iOS probably because we don't yet have an App. And our mobile usage is about 30% which we can certainly increase.

Silkroad - October 18, 2020, 11:24 am

That's some great news, I can't wait to try it out.

I had to make a mobile app for one of my IRL projects for that same reason. I was wanting mobile traffic but wasn't getting it, once there was an app in the app store, mobile traffic increased by so much that I stopped even updating the website and only worry about the apps now, haha.

I'm excited though, and I'm sure this is pushing it, but Giphy offers a really nice and easy API and it'd be really nice if users were able to send GIFs like in Facebook Messenger over HF convos. Not sure on your take but it'd be a neat little feature.

Will the app be for every device, android, iOS and windows phone? Or for one OS only?

I've thought about Giphy personally and think it would make a pleasant addition to the app, but it's not a priority or even discussed yet. Concept is to make the convo feel really GOOD in the app.

iOS/Android.

Giphy would be a really pleasant addition to the app and the API is extremely easy to use, I was kind of surprised how straight forward it was while I was using it.

It's also my favorite way of ignoring someone when they message me. Instead of leaving them on read, I just send them a vague GIF. ?

I may be pushing it yet again, but are read receipts going to make their way to HF convos eventually?

Omniscient - October 18, 2020, 11:33 am

I have considered doing more gif's. I have yet to discuss it with Xerotic though. He's been busy enough. We'll get there. I don't think it's important on day one.

What's the difference with scrolling around in the browser and scrolling around in an app?

The difference is, that my screen *Iphone 7, is such a small screen, that I have to go from right to left & up and down. If I am on the computer, I can see everything at once, which is what I believe that I will be able to on an app as well.

EDIT^ Basically I hate that I have to go from right to left on the browser on my phone.

Any app with most mimic the browser interface. How would you expect all the data to be on an app?

Quote:EDIT^ Basically I hate that I have to go from right to left on the browser on my phone.
You really shouldn't be going left/right on the browser. Everything is responsive and should fit for the width. What pages do you side scroll?

Exalted - October 18, 2020, 12:59 pm

This app looks sick! Good work!

This happens to me when I have the logo displayed. It will allow you to scroll left/right. Here's an example:

With Logo \(Click to View\)
Without Logo \(Click to View\)

Omniscient - October 18, 2020, 1:06 pm

I think I see why the logo is stretching on older and smaller screens. I will discuss the required changes with Xerotic. There is a min-width 768px for the response.css and I think it should be smaller. The iPhone 7 appears to be a 750px width.

But hiding the logo is super easy and simple change to fix it.

Jinu - October 18, 2020, 1:27 pm

In the browser, while continuously attacking the HUM, sometimes the page will get auto-zoom. So from now, I can hit HUMs easily without any block.

Xerotic - October 18, 2020, 1:48 pm

(Oct 18, 2020 01:15 PM)xadamxk Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) That looks like more of a messaging app than an app to browse HF, but regardless it will be great for the community.

That is accurate. Convo and Nottfy. But it's authorized via the API (no username/password entry in app - mobile browser popup with HF API auth instead) so that means in the future we can extend it and build more of the forum functionality. It's impossible to convert a huge site like HF into a mobile app overnight or even over the course of a single month.

When I would go into one of the forum sections, as where I can see all threads in the forum section, I guess, because of long names, etc. I had to scroll left and right, to really see it all. "Zooming out" it would just auto zoom back in after pressing something, so had to zoom out every time eXceptional - October 18, 2020, 3:22 pm

This looks amazing. I've been away from the forum activity for a while now but getting the notify and convo thing to work in an app would really be a great addition. However I would still wait for the update where I could browse sections and even post threads or make replies.

I can never deny the fact that the development here is simply awesome and has grown massively in the past few years.

One thing I'm curious about is the iOS app, not an app developer myself so I'm not sure of the process but is it not a real pain to get an app on there, and would the name of this forum possibly hinder the chances of the app being approved?

I have no plans to add in-app purchases with Apple. What I might do is offer turn the Apple app into a paid version with its own usergroup. But even that's not something I actually plan to do. Just would be better option imho than in-app purchasing. Buy the app, get stuff. Apple makes everything complicated. I hate the company.

We bought a Mac Mini to do the uploading to the App Store because you can't do it from just any device, and not even from just any Apple device like an iPhone or iPad. It must run MacOS. So I bought what appeared to be a decent Mac Mini for a cheap price $250. Turns out that I needed a more recent system that can be updated to at least Catalina Mac OS. We're trying to update the Mini with unofficial patches but who knows if it will work. I may have to fork over $800 for a new Mac Mini just to upload the App and nothing else.

What a horrible company Apple is.

Just go to BestBuy purchase the Mac mini do the upload and then return it back to Best Buy. They accept returns even if it's opened and you get your full money back instead of the hassle of trying to use unofficial patches.

But this would just be good for uploading the app not sure in order to update the app if you can just use the old Mac mini you purchased or if you still going to need the new one.

As an ex-retailer I am not going to do that buy, use, return thing....I don't agree with that. We will also need to use the device regularly for updates which I imagine will be frequent. Also we will be doing other app development.

I can get $800 official Apple store Mac Mini latest version. I can probably save $200 buying some refurb'd but not sure I'm going to do that.

Great job as always though.

One of the most important duties the app will fulfill is push notifications for iOS. On Android, this is already possible via Chrome browser. On iOS, a standalone app is required. Convo/Notify are a great first step. The construction of the API earlier this year was crucial towards this app being developed. While convo/notify activity technically take place over the live websocket connection, you will authenticate the app using the HF API. So instead of entering your username/password in the app itself, you click the "Login" button and your default mobile browser opens to the HF API authentication page (similar to when you auth on Discord, except no code required on your part). After you "approve" the API access, you will automatically be redirected back to the app which will log in.

Since you will be logged in using the API, we will be able to access any data that is part of the API (v2). <https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=6083782>

Also, since we created the API, we can always extend it to suit our needs moving forward with the app. If something arises in the future that we'd like to add to the app but isn't accessible to the API, then we simply add it to the API and then we can add it to the app.

(Oct 26, 2020 12:17 PM)xadamxk Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I think that is against the App Store policy to offer a custom currency (bytes) for purchase via IAP. It sounds weird since games do it, but I read something about it on a dev blog a few weeks back. D:You can't offer in game currency to be sold BOTH via IAP (Apple Pay) AND on the website directly outside of the app.

Just like you can't buy Netflix via IAP.

Can buy [BRAND NAME REMOVED] gold via IAP but can't buy it via [BRAND NAME REMOVED].com

Update: Apple approved our Test Flight app which means we are likely to see full app approval once all screenshot sizes are submitted.
