Thread: Have You Had A Near Death Experience Before?

Blockonome - October 21, 2020, 2:41 am

Dear HF,

I want to know if anyone of you have been close to dying and if so, what happened and why?

Myself, I have been poisoned before, I was on a holiday with family in Thailand and I was told that I was sick during one night, I did not think much of it, because I just felt a little bit uncomfortable. The day went on, I went to a bar, got some drinks and food with family, before I know it, I need to throw up and take a shit every 10th minute. And then BOOM, I slam to the ground and I am being thrown in the car by my family to rush to the hospital.

Basically, in a country where even the doctor did not speak fluent English (this was in a smaller village), I was told that I had been poisoned and the poison had reached my heart. So if I did not get into the hospital in time, I would have died. When I left the doctor made me sign a waiver, that if I die, it is not their fault, because I wanted to leave the hospital early.

Not a funny experience.

TL;DR - I got poison in my heart and almost died, but I live on to this day.

Doom - October 21, 2020, 3:19 am

Damn man. I'm glad you survived.

When I was younger I ran down a really big hill with a 100ft drop at the bottom and I just managed to stop myself as I reached the edge. I was about 1 step away from probably falling to my death.

This must also have been a pretty scary experience, especially if you can see how it would have went, like falling straight down.

Yeah it was man! I would have definitely have died or been seriously injured, I still sometimes have nightmares about it to this day.

Yeah man, can totally understand you with that, shit like that really makes you think!

Stig - October 21, 2020, 5:19 am

I think possibly but Its hard to tell for sure if it was "near death" I don't prefer to think about that stuff. No fun.

Prawnster - October 21, 2020, 5:20 am

Pretty crazy, and idk if I've had any near death experiences but I've been rushed with a machette before some guy tryna rob my shit and fallen off high ass ladders and shit, but never anything I was worried about my life truly in so I guess not.

Apocryphon - October 21, 2020, 5:39 am had a bad motorcycle accident, flew over 10 meters, broke my femur and the bone came out, 2 surgeries and a lot of blood lost, gladly im alive.

Scoppa - October 21, 2020, 5:39 am

I've been already between life and death after a car crash.

Luckily I didn't have keep undesirable effects after that.

Mr. Corleone - October 21, 2020, 5:51 am

I didn't necessarily have a 'near-death experience' but I've had too many times that I could've easily died if it wasn't for the roll of the dice.

Regulus - October 21, 2020, 5:53 am

Yeah three suicide attempts,
a heart attack at the age of 15
And I am born with a heart disease so barely made it into this world alive, made plenty of surgeries so I have a huge scar on my chest all the way down to the umbilicus / navel

Man.... That scares me to hear that, please, life is precious, make every moment count until you are like 169 years old.

Yeah I've realized that.
It ain't worth it, and it sucks to live everyday not knowing I might get another heart attack.

I am trying to live to the fullest <3

Forensic - October 21, 2020, 6:31 am

Probably a few, missed being hit by a bus going real fast by the tiniest margin one time. The only time I felt like I was going to die was a panic attack though lmao

Cooligan - October 21, 2020, 11:19 am

Yes, and much more than I'd like to admit lol.

Net Hustler - October 21, 2020, 4:10 pm

Nico - October 21, 2020, 4:26 pm

Almost fell off the roof of a 3-story school building at my old job demolishing an old AC Unit. It was raining and I slipped and stumbled down the incline of the roof.

Other than that nothing that I can think of, but I'm sure I've been close to death many times before.

Glad you have survived that experience of near death my brother.

Did you learn anything out of that experience?

Geass - October 21, 2020, 7:51 pm

I read your story just one question, did someone tried to kill you or it was really bad cooked food?

Pawnhub - October 21, 2020, 8:07 pm

Had a couple close calls. Some were by fault. Some were just bad luck but I'm still breathing.
Hell riding motorcycles everyday you'll have close calls nearly every month.

atlantic - October 21, 2020, 11:48 pm

was in a south America country with few friends I met @ my arrival lounge. fortunately we stay at the same location..

They went and fucked with the wrong guy, they came looking for this MFs,i was helping an elderly Lady to light up her Cigarette and keep her smiling with some pet talks.

This guys came in our apartment and asked the old lady,who is this? she said my son in-law. they passed and by the time they left after the rain of bullets,every one except me and the old lady, are sleeping with the fishes[God Father }

I left the apartments ASAP, the old lady kept laughing saying I am a coward...

ScorpionX - October 21, 2020, 11:59 pm

What a terrible experience. So sorry for that. Thankfully, you lived to tell the story. As for me, I wouldn't say I have had a near-death experience. I've been lucky, I guess.

Vitello - October 22, 2020, 12:21 am

I almost drowned once.

I went to a lake with some friends to go skinny dipping. I totally underestimated how hard it is to swim in freshwater compared to saltwater. We were really far out, and at some point, I just couldn't swim anymore, no matter how hard I tried. I was too exhausted.

I shouted for help, but none of my friends had the energy to help me. I panicked real hard, and just as I was about to give up, and just sink to the bottom, some random girl jumped into the water and saved me.

As far as I remember, I didn't swallow any water, but when I got out of the water I puked like I never puked before. I think it was because of exhaustion.

When I was talking to the girl afterwards, it turned out that she was a professional swimmer and worked as a lifeguard in her free time. It was also kinda awkward because I was naked. But she was really cool about it.

But if she didn't go for a walk that day, then I would have been dead.

UsernameByte - October 22, 2020, 12:22 am

Almost drowned as a kid, it was bad, someone saved me.

They could not determine what kind of poison it was at the hospital, meaning, it was not one of the normal types of poisoning, which means that somebody might have done it on purpose, but I guess I will never know

oRequiem - October 22, 2020, 2:04 am

I have yes.

It's very traumatizing for me, still messes with me today.

It was around 3 years ago (don't remember the month exactly).

What happened was going out with a few friends that I met in high school (I'm 23 years old right now, 24 soon and yes I was legal age) to smoke and drink at a party at one of their friend's house.

We were in a circle passing a blunt over doing some type of game to hold it in, I was pretty high at the time then next thing I know it, I'm on the ground in the kitchen with a concussion. Remember, this is the first time I've ever had a concussion. Being high at the same time is terrifying since I get paranoid when I'm high (That's why I don't smoke weed anymore).

2 friends drove me to the hospital and I was shaking in pain constantly.

What happened was that my potassium dropped into a severe level, I don't remember the exact number. It caused me to faint face first onto the kitchen floor, on the way down I guess glass sliced open my chin to the point where you can see the bone. Once I hit the floor, the left part of my jaw got fractured and it cut my ear canal which got a lot of blood leaking from my left ear. When I woke up, I just remember constant pain and constantly going in and out of reality. Whenever I got to the hospital, a friend got my parents on the phone and they got their quick. I remember that they said if I came in even 5 minutes late because of my potassium, I was pretty much going to go braindead and eventually off this Earth. That's what terrifies me about this all.

So I have a scar inside my left ear since the cut had to heal on its own (was deaf in my left ear for about 6 weeks I think due to a lot of dried blood?) Not using my jaw until it healed on its own and dealing with a concussion for the longest time and now have a scar on my chin that had to get stitches.

Robotsapian - October 22, 2020, 5:22 am

Yeah when I was 15 years old I had a weird experience

At 15 i had alot of problems with my body, like in winter my body was too cold and i looked pale maybe because my heart didnt work right, So one day I was sleeping and i went out of my body (astral project) and after all this experience when I woke up i was feeling alot better.

After some time my heart was working better and all the symptoms were gone wtf

Prettykitty - October 22, 2020, 12:49 pm

I've had two near life experiences.

SaketSaket - October 22, 2020, 1:36 pm

Yes me & my family had major accident... while driving on the highway one big container truck just crossed the lane & hit us from side... our car damaged beyond repair but we escaped with minor injuries....

Brock Obama - October 22, 2020, 1:53 pm

Twice.

First time I almost got trampled on by a herd of cows. Second time, I got attacked by a group of people on a night out.

I obviously need to avoid crowds.

I was chased with a knife once outside Mcdonalds after a fight against another gang.

I was in a car during the winter the car smashed on one of the pumps in a gas station.

Those two is my near-death experience.

Neon™ - October 22, 2020, 2:53 pm

call it near or not but it haunts me to this day.

Was on a trip with my family to Genoa, Italy (with our family car) and we crossed this bridge which collapsed 3 days later killing 43 people.

Here's a video:

I almost drowned as a child. I got stuck in a floaty upside down under the water and I couldn't get my legs out of it. If it wasn't for my mom noticing and having someone grab me I probably would've died.

Now I have a fear of drowning haha.

For real! In the moment it's kind of like "is this really happening?".

Nate - October 22, 2020, 5:37 pm

Proibably both my car accidents, first one was 65 to 0 into a back of a semi no seat belt, came out unscaved.

Second lost control and hit a house Imfao, same no seatbelt, unharmed keep ur head up homie. find something that you enjoy and stay positive. life is a rough thing, but it's what god makes us go through before death.

jecoylecoy - October 22, 2020, 8:48 pm

When I have my first time being in low potassium, my friends and I have those thoughts. It was the very worst thing that happened to me. I can not lift my arms and feet.

hfrocket1713 - October 22, 2020, 8:49 pm

yeah a few stick out to me.

one that was actually quite recent a little over a year ago. long story short, got into a altercation and hit a glass window. I fell on the glass and my whole right hand was cut into pieces with my tendons fully exposed and my piece of skin flapped open. Also had a cut on my buttocks that was super deep from the glass. got surgery, had to do PT. now what's left is a very big scar that's improved and a little bit of permanent damage in my right hand which isn't as bad as they thought it'd be. doesn't really affect my day to day life only time i really do notice a difference between my left and right hand is when i actually compare them. if I fell on the glass with my stomach facing down, or the fact it could've cut a huge artery in my neck.

another time was a few years back maybe 7/8 when I was visiting cousins. I was riding a bike with my cousin and I went down a very steep road and the bikes brake were shot and weren't working. as I was going down the hill cars were passing me and I was going super fast and I didn't even have a helmet. i truly thought I was gonna hit a car or smash my head. but i kept control and made it. to this day it scares me thinking about that.
