Thread: Ripping

I would like to know how to rip videos from a streaming service for personal use i.e. Netflix, hulu etc..

I want to know if there is any other way other than using a screen recorder because A) using a screen recorder takes too long for an hour movie B) inefficient if there's a selection a movies I want to download it would take days if not weeks to get the job done C) If there's a mistake made via screen recording like moving the mouse cursor around I won't be able to get the full screen recording

D) recording audio can be difficult if the screen recorder records more than the speakers i.e. the built in microphone

If anyone can help or give advice it would be well appreciated

Sorry, newbie here.

Is there a better way than OBS, I think your missing the point of my thread. OBS is a screen capture. I'm wondering if it's possible to download i.e. from a video streaming site like netflix movies the same way you download Youtube videos with a youtube mp4 converter. Screen capture will take to long if your going to record thousands of hours of video.

If search all google and can't find.

The essence of what I'm asking is could videos from streaming sites be downloaded or ripped from the site rather than using a screen capture to record the footage
