Thread: Age gap

hayesh - November 25, 2020, 1:42 pm

I was reading a story about a 17 year who was arrested for sexual relations with a 13 year old. It didn't seem that big of a deal to me. What is your opinion? Should he be jailed for this. They was a 3.5 year age difference.

Asgard - November 25, 2020, 1:44 pm

Technically speaking, the Romeo & Juliet law allows for a minimum of 16 to a maximum of 23 years old .. a 7 year age gap.

However, in this situation, the particular individuals were 17 and 13.. 13 being the illegal of the two and therefore making it a criminal offense.

What would seem a big deal to you? If she was 11?

Black Whale - November 25, 2020, 1:48 pm

Nah bro a 17 year old shouldn't be doing that the maturity gap is way too far

That's a bit extensive, don't ya think? Lol.

Come on now guys, let's be real.

The fact that we're even having this conversation right now is a tad unsettling.

I just think it's strange he doesn't see that as a big deal. 13 and 17 is a huge difference in maturity & mentality.

Although I agree with you, the level of maturity and mentality would be much the same, imo.

They're both teenagers.. pre-adults..

One just has a few more years of stupidity under their belt than the other.. that's all.

Either way you look at it - it's wrong.

Juoku - November 25, 2020, 2:06 pm

The thing with age gap is it mainly depends on WHEN.

If you're 28 and you'll date a 34 year old noone bats an eye, but if you're 20 and you date a 16 year old it's not the same, it's all about mental maturity, even if someone seems mature for thier age they still make decisions they might and probably will regret later on, which is why this law was created.

The USA doesn't have federal age limits does it? Isn't it different in every state over there?

In the majority of the world the age of consent is 16.

But sex education classes and parents should be teaching young men the age of consent in their country, jurisdiction or state.

A 17 year old should also know that 13 is a baby really.

Lyrlei - November 25, 2020, 4:15 pm

Mixed opinions, I think it's a crime, but even if there was no manipulation involved, it still should be disallowed since the parents or the government usually has to take responsibility for people's mistake, as usual.

Prawnster - November 25, 2020, 4:18 pm

Imo when ur like that age, you shouldn't mess with anyone who isn't like a year either way of your age, until your 19 or so (just my opinion) cuz at that age, people are at extremely different levels of maturity even in just a 2 year age gap.

I am in the USA and this is where the Romeo & Juliet Law takes place most often.

You're right, age of legal consent is indeed 16, however - at the parents discretion until they're 18.

But age of consent around the world varies from 14-21 I think there may from memory even be a third world country which is still 12 which is terrible. Don't remember which one. One African country it is 21. Japan has a federal age of 14 which sounds awful but in the prefectures in Japan it's apparently usually actually 16.

In the USA it's different in every state and the Romeo and Juliet Laws will be different in every state and some won't even have them I believe.

I'm just going from memory when I looked this up on Wikipedia one time out of curiosity.

And yeah I do think the 17 year old needs a charge. Unless he's intellectually handicapped or something.

Mr. Atlas - November 25, 2020, 4:58 pm

17 and 13 years old the problem is not the 3.5 years gap it is especially that the girl is 13 years old ... she is still imature and easily influenced who knows if she really agreed or if he didn't force her hand if he had been 21 and she 16 it wouldn't have shocked me

The Pact - November 25, 2020, 5:54 pm

Honestly it's hard enough to fight a man off at 19 let alone 13 so the idea of consent at that age is completely absurd and anyway it's never legally consent at 13.

Every state has variants and stipulations.

siddy357 - November 25, 2020, 6:50 pm

considering the age gap of the 13 and 17 is a big of a deal because of the maturity and mentality of the kids.

InsanityConfusion - November 25, 2020, 6:51 pm

He knows better, honestly that age gap is pretty big, so yes.

Asgard - November 25, 2020, 7:23 pm

Just to be clear, I am in no way encouraging this conduct. Just statements.

Psilocybinaut - November 25, 2020, 9:39 pm

A lot matures between the times in the gap, you were a completely different person when you were 13 vs when you were 17, right? I just think the maturity gap in most places leaves the lack of connection or relativity. It's best to date closer to your age group when it comes to the ages when you're still maturing and your brain is still growing

Rezon® - November 25, 2020, 11:59 pm

What a stupid fucking question, yes that's disgusting man.

DeITex - November 26, 2020, 12:12 am

Even when I was 17, I knew about who I could "legally" "mess around with". Don't think there are many of us who didn't. I believe 13 & 17 is definitely a no go, but also (ideally) everyone would wait to be at least 18 first. I know that's not gonna happen for most (didn't for me either), but the age limiting laws are there for many reasons (and damn good ones at that). It sucks that the kid did what he did, he should have (and hopefully now does) known better. Depending on what his sentence was? If I were the judge, and I could somehow align it to be this way, I'd give the kid a short sentence (maybe 3-6 months) and offer him early release upon the completion of a sex education and some sort of risk mitigation class that could teach him the importance of restraint in these situations. At the end of the day though, I see 13 with 17 as messed up as 14 with 18.

Yes he should be jailed and punished.

It all depends on whether the sex took place with the consent of both parties and it was not "forced" by either party.

Blogger - November 26, 2020, 12:42 am

Everywhere is different. Always have to look up the law when it comes to shit like that.

Rezon ® - November 26, 2020, 1:28 am

Had to -rep yo for this as well, its quite disturbing.

If someone is underage in your jurisdiction it doesn't matter how much consent they verbally may have given. Anyone under the age of consent where you live is legally not able to give consent and the older person will have committed a crime. Ignorance of the law is also not an excuse in court.

Yes he should be jailed for it. At 17 I was completely mature myself, and to think of the difference between myself at 13 and 17 there's a huge shift.

How can you think it's not a big deal? It's paedophilia.

neocortex - November 29, 2020, 11:42 pm

I think its the modern times that vilify such age gap in relations.

Read on what age Queens/Kings of France / England got married during pre-modern times. It is like the norm back then to marry and consummate at such a young age and to this day one of the states legal age to get married is set at 15 or 16.

Agree here mate, I don't know what this thread was even created.

The Pact - November 30, 2020, 12:37 am

The one exception might be Romeo and Juliet laws but a lot of places don't have those at all so if you're a kid yourself you still better Google that shit because you could still get in big trouble.

ItsMeFox - November 30, 2020, 2:39 am both of them just kids! that's all i can say!

K1. - November 30, 2020, 2:52 am

Not sure how this is even a convo at this point

At the end of the day you don't need the law to tell you what's right and wrong, it's common sense

Some girl who's 13 is obviously not gonna see the tactics that a 17+ year old is gonna be deploying so yeah it's fugged up and anyone who's not down with that kinda bs would see that lol

I beg someone try @ me to defend this tomfoolery

MarvinMalware - November 30, 2020, 7:46 am

I don't know why I'm surprised to see this but I am. Yes, this is wrong. 13 years old? I'm actually really struggling to try to understand where in anyone's brain it's acceptable to abuse someone who's just begun their journey to adulthood? At 17 years old, you should be fully aware that a 13-year-old is not someone you should be searching for a romantic relationship with.

Artisan - November 30, 2020, 7:58 am

The 17 year old should have considered two things:

1. Is she old enough to give consent?
2. Is he young enough to be tried as a minor?

He was clearly thinking with his...
