Thread: Is it worth visiting London in december?

Roberto Scorpius Malfoy - November 25, 2020, 7:36 pm

I was hoping to visit London in the middle of December, I just wonder if anyone has any information about the lockdowns, like will the museums get opened in the middle of December or?

Mr. Atlas - November 25, 2020, 7:56 pm

it must be cold and humid

Looks like most places will be in at best a tier 2 situation, no one really takes it seriously in Greater London, even the police, despite living in a 'hotspot'. Can't speak for central but I'd imagine they have to show face/force, be seen to be doing something, such as throwing a 72 year old woman spread eagled into the back of a police van in front of the house of commons like they did yesterday. Low hanging fruit comes to mind.

wont go, they say that we need to self quarantine for 2weeks and shit.

I live in London, everything has opened up now, but if you come to the country (guessing you are not living in UK), you will have to quarantine for 2 weeks as far as I know, would it be worth it for you?

London has literally just come out of lockdown today, and its on a tier 2. So shops, restaurants are all open. Whether I'd choose to go while all this craziness is going on is another thing ????

London is in lockdown, isn't it? I saw in some videos that the streets were empty in some of the biggest tourist attractions. I remember going during the summer and it was already getting a little cold.

My aunt lives in London and hasn't mentioned any major restrictions. Anyway, have a nice and safe journey?

We consider below 10degree as winter so we have winter from nov- feb.

Michael - December 3, 2020, 2:55 am

London is nice, and especially during December.

I wouldn't visit it right now, with lockdowns and you may need to self isolate for at least 2 weeks if you're from a certain country.

How about the snow brother? Have you been experienced going out and holding and playing with snow in your hands? :D
