

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Do you watch any true crime shows or read true crime books

The Pact - November 27, 2020, 4:55 pm

What cases interest you? Like mass murderers and serial killers etc... Or Forensic Files or whatever.

Br?dley - November 27, 2020, 5:09 pm

Yes I do. Followed Ivan milat here in Australia where he murdered backpackers in a forest between Sydney and Melbourne. Always maintained his innocence and died not long ago taking his secrets to his grave.

A lot of crime shows are still on in my country, I do watch them when I have time but it's kinda creepy how people can have the drive to do such a thing. Makes me sick.

Grim - November 27, 2020, 5:11 pm

i do follow some true crime podcasts but for TV shows not really

The Pact - November 27, 2020, 8:49 pm

(Nov 27, 2020 06:38 PM)Snyke Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I dont watch any TV shows, or movies really. But I find some interest in Yudhijit Bhattacharjee's literature works.

Yeah I actually only watch old ones on YouTube like Forensic Files and Deadly Women and 2020 on ID.

Where do people go to listen to podcasts I just listen to YouTube while cooking to dinner but it might be better to listen to a Podcast.

Lyrlei - November 27, 2020, 9:28 pm

I used to enjoy watching cold case investigations in my free time. I've also watched some 48 hours episodes.

Yanix - November 27, 2020, 9:36 pm

Crime case investigation movies and shows would be really fun to watch.

Rezon ® - November 28, 2020, 2:18 am

I like watching them, I like to find out why they actually do it. So I tend to watch ones based on real life.

Like "Making a murder"

The Pact - November 28, 2020, 3:16 am

(Nov 28, 2020 03:18 AM)Rezon ® Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I like watching them, I like to find out why they actually do it. So I tend to watch ones based on real life.

Like "Making a murder"

Yeah I'm just interested in WHY they actually do it so I don't enjoy cold case stuff at all because not knowing who did, it let alone why, just irritates the fuck out of me.

LoremIpsum - November 28, 2020, 3:24 am

I used to, but after seeing more than my eyes wished to see in real life, I decided to get away from the 'negativity'.

I mean it's a nice thing to watch, you can learn from it too, but it won't improve your life in a positive way I think.

The Pact - November 30, 2020, 2:41 am

It can get overly dark at times. I go through phases of being interested and then want something lighter.

2xTheTap115 - November 30, 2020, 3:42 am

(Nov 27, 2020 05:55 PM)The Pact Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) What cases interest you? Like mass murderers and serial killers etc... Or Forensic Files or whatever.

Once, when I was younger, I watched the program "997" en masse. It is a Polish chronicle dealing with mysterious murders and other unresolved criminal cases?

The Pact - December 4, 2020, 5:25 pm

LOL seems like you guys are all into the cold cases but they're the ones I don't like. I just find them so frustrating. I only want to know what happens and I'm more interested in WHY people did the things they did.

SoulZeh - December 4, 2020, 5:28 pm

(Nov 28, 2020 03:18 AM)Rezon ® Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I like watching them, I like to find out why they actually do it. So I tend to watch ones based on real life.

Like "Making a murder"

I also watched making a murder, I think that's the only "true" crime thing I've ever watched, besides that I watch criminal minds.

Forensic - December 4, 2020, 8:17 pm

I used to be into all that shit but it got repetitive after a while. I really liked unsolved stuff for some reason. Missing people etc. There was some real fucked up crime stories I can never forget.

ColdCypher - December 22, 2020, 10:53 pm

Mr. Grisham's legal genre always makes for a good read.