Thread: [\[ADVICE NEEDED \] - "Trusted" members with toxic TOS marketing strategies](#)

Lrrr - December 1, 2020, 7:56 pm

I have seen a massive up-tick in shady Terms of Service along with marketing gimmicks to basically make any kind of refund impossible. I may understand this tactic for specific (trust me, very specific cases)...but on the whole, these TOS are bullshit.

Let me give you a perfect example of what I mean in action (but trust me, this is not the only tos horror story)

Today, I decided to buy-in to the Panthers Poker Competition (<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=6124478>). About an hour after I bought in, I realized that I had miscalculated (my own fault) the starting time of the contest and that I wouldn't be able to make it.

Now those are literally the facts. I bought in, I agreed to the following contract:

Spoiler \(Click to View\)

Ok Now I agreed to this contract and that's fine, but I would like to point out that it's sketchy to add a TOS in a thread which you are then free to change at will. That seems sketchy sorry. In any case, I agreed to the contract.

So let's take a look at the TOS at the time I purchased (now I have to take a screen shot because the TOS can change at any time i guess!?!?)

Spoiler \(Click to View\)

Ok as the TOS states:

Code If you dont turn up then you get no refund game is simple 1st 2nd 3rd prizes. all entree pot will go together and we will sort the prizes out.

So I hit up @Zeus@ who is running the contest and asked for a refund...here is how our incredibly toxic conversation went.

Spoiler \(Click to View\)

So that's about the end of it....I didn't want to dispute the transaction because I'm not entirely sure if what he says about his TOS is accurate...it seems like I would be entitled to a refund.

The larger point, is why all the blaming and hassle over something that literally hasn't even happened yet. I gave the dude money without reading and doing timezone conversion. I made a mistake. I asked for a refund or a chance to play in another different tourney.

Then after I get the bare minimum out of him (offering me a free entry to another tourney) he calls me a loser....which leads me to believe that he would simply say I didn't show up for the tourney gg.

And that's the problem...why are some sellers so hell bent on keeping their money at all costs. I always try to do good business and I understand sometimes refunds just can't happen but when did sellers start literally trying to strong arm Omni into a convo about $25 dollar competition that didn't even happen yet.

Open to opinions.

Put this user on your ignore and never deal with him or associate yourself with him. That's been my best decision months ago.

It's funny seeing all the scummy, low life, toxic shit he's done over the past year.

What's up with you always asking for refunds for poker tournies tho??? kappa.

I honestly say by looking at my last and one of my very first DD, I think the ToS of contracts should be stricken. No thread from a ToS should be able to be edited and I think ToS should stick to a contract once created.

I love this idea.

Zeus - December 1, 2020, 8:50 pm

It's simple you buyin there is no refunds in there tos if you don't enter. You bought in seen the whole thread because you didn't look at the time you want a refund when you completed the contract. And it is all done once entering why would you ask for a refund. Have a good day. Don't purchase something you can't be there on time simple.

You missed the entire point of the post...the question is why can't I refund? The tos is slimey as fuck. Thats the point. Also your tos does not say no refunds it says no refunds if you don't show up.

Yes. Absolutely yes. The tos needs to be in the contract and uneditable by anyone.

It effects the pot how? He edits his thread according to his own TOS and the prizes are figured out at the end. I do not effect the pot in any way other than causing an inconvenience to him because he has to edit the thread twice.

That's bs and you know it. Even my TOS are jewish, I put "any cancelations must be made at least 24hrs in advance". When in reality, no poker tournament is ever ran like that. You can register and then unregister at any point as long as the tournament hasn't started. In person and online.

Don't ruin the very small community of poker players on HF with your bs scummy scams. Thanks. I am tempted to not allow your little tournament to be played using Gamblers home game on PS. If you were even planning to do that.... zzz

Last tournies I held I put in $580 of my own money into the prize pools and ended up -$300 or so, plus 5 pink diamonds which is around $1k+. So I gave away $1300+.

Since you know staff don't get involved with deal disputes (even though you want to try and strong arm omni into out convo) we both know this won't happen.

Further more its not just about a refund dude...its about more than you if you can believe it. Being fair should be something to strive for. Yeah, he could have just refunded and taken $25 out of the pot and I don't think it would have been a big deal.

But honestly I think he has no obligation to refund OP at all. He was told before purchasing what the starting time was. Regardless of how he thinks the ToS is worded, anyone with some common sense can understand it straight up means no refund if you can't or don't attend.

OP you don't deserve a refund for your own negligence of fully understanding the terms you agreed to.

And I understand where you're getting at too, and I agree. It really isn't of any inconvenience to him to refund you other than 5 minutes of his time.

It's being done to spite you for potentially wasting his time on a situation that could have been avoided had you read a little more carefully.

Everyone sucks here, block him/don't deal with him in the future and take the loss as a learning lesson, or as suggested see if someone else who will be available during that time wants to take your spot instead. That seems like the best solution for every party involved.

That wasn't really an issue in this case, he didn't edit the ToS, more so a misunderstanding/vague wording of the ToS. Regardless, that's a great idea.

ToS being on the thread, or on the contract either one is fine/doesn't matter, but the important part is the editing of the ToS.

I think ToS should have it's own section/entry form of sorts, and still be editable, but with a timestamped history of every edit/previous version.

Because there's plenty of legit circumstances where a ToS may need to be edited, and is being done not for some shady purpose. But if you make it so anyone can see the current ToS, if it's been changed at all, what date/time it was changed, and what it said previously, well that would be quite helpful in preventing shady terms.

Lrrr I think you should see if anything of the sort's been suggested/denied already, and if not make a thread on this in the suggestion sub-forum :).

Neither the contract or the thread tos was edited it was always the same if you don't make it to the computer = no refund simple! Don't know where you guys magically think it changed.

Might as well give my opinion in this, even tho I am in the Panthers group I am going to be neutral in this case.

TOS should never be changed in my opinion. Whenever it has been changed for this poker tournament I don't know and I won't pick a side.

About the no-refund policy for this case. Imagine you bought a ticket for an NBA game, but then you remembered you won't make it. Do you get a refund? No.

Just try to sell your spot to someone here if possible.

Writing this while on phone, so might be little difficult to read.

End of the day they are making up lies nothing in the tos was edited so I don't know where this come from, ask the first people that joined and every other entree what they would think if someone has entered and removed their prize they wouldn't be happy simple.

Why should I compensate on his mistake because he can't read a time and date.

Ivex - December 2, 2020, 7:42 am

I understand the mental block to giving refunds, once you've got the money you feel ownership of it, the endowment effect. However, if the service hasn't taken place yet (in this case the tournament) then it's just the fair choice to give a refund. Less drama, you feel better about yourself for doing it, everyone is happy. Being so difficult over such a small sum of money just makes the user in question seem untrustworthy. Think about how this makes you look: if someone see's this would they want to trust you with $250? Probably not.

This is the second thread that I have seen in two days regarding the concept of ToS. It's been a long-standing issue that people on this forum establish a ToS that essentially bars all refunds (which, mind you, wouldn't be contractually acceptable under law).

I am not surprised that this is common on the forum, given that most members are looking to make a quick buck rather than run a genuine service/business. Frankly, thread ToS should be absolutely irrelevant. Terms should be FORCED to be stated on the contract itself. Even that solution, though, wouldn't resolve the amount of members who write an absolutely moronic ToS and stick to it.

Money Man - December 2, 2020, 8:51 am

Because various people have bought in seeing the pot as that I'm not willing to comprise his 25 and putting that more into the pot for his mistake for not being able to read the time he clearly seen it all when he purchased on the thread from how I'm feeling is he is doing this intentionally and he needs to grow up.

I see no reason for this thread to remain open honestly.

Regardless of anyone's opinion, Zeus owes OP no refund, he's really not morally contracted to do so if he doesn't want to either. Are we about to start refunding everyone who can't fully read/understand a 3 sentence long ToS. I get Zeus' stance, its the principle, even if you all think it makes him an asshole.

ZEUS NEVER EDITED THE TOS, that's not even relevant to this situation. Technically speaking, Lrrr just did not read/understand the ToS fully to begin with.

Lrrr - Close this thread, and make a new thread in the suggestions sub-forum about having non-editable ToS in the contract agreement, rather than editable ToS posted to user's threads. It's a great suggestion, and that's the appropriate place to continue getting feedback on the idea. If you actually want to see changes made, do it properly.

I guess you're not understanding what i'm saying. You're actually derailing the idea of making changes to way ToS work by keeping this open as a community alert, where anyone who reads this thread is just interested in the drama between two users.

MAKE A THREAD IN THE SUGGESTIONS SUBFORUM IF YOU WANT SOMETHING DONE, ITS THERE FOR THIS REASON.

edit: and while i COMPLETELY AGREE with you on your stance of "whack ToS". What Zeus did isn't even whack ToS, he never tried editing it, and the ToS is pretty straight forward that if you cannot attend the event FOR ANY REASON, there will be no refunds.

But again, I agree with your stance on the idea, I just don't think it's relevant to this situation, and you're just further taking attention away from the real issue at hand by keeping this thread active, make a separate thread for your ToS suggestion.

point blank Zeus may be an asshole for not refunding you, but you're kind of equally an asshole for not paying attention to the terms you agreed to, and then making a stink when you're not being refunded for something that was your own simple mistake from the start.

The suggestion is that ToS should be bound to user contracts, in order to prevent seller's from modifying their ToS after people purchased.

I honestly do think that's something that should be addressed, in some way or another.

His tos does not say "no refund" this isn't gaslighting dude, this is a matter of fucking principle...as far as I'm concerned the tos is worded in a way that makes it sound like I am entitled to a refund UNLESS I don't show up.

Not only that, the argument that it somehow effect further sales if I get refunded is also not true by his own tos.

The tos is worded in a way that makes it impossible to get a refund but still makes it seem like a refund is possible.

If no refund is possible just day NO REFUNDS...don't try to manipulate the situation and take advantage of people its just bad business.

This. From my personal point of view, this line alone quite literally means "no refunds" ofc that's me personally, I could see that being hard for someone to understand who doesn't primarily speak english, or for other reasons.

But yeah bro, imo the ToS was pretty clear that it was a no refund situation, for regardless of what reason you can't show up for.

Well the principle is that you bought a item/service agreeing to terms of service. And it's no one's fault but your own that you didn't acknowledge or understand these terms, especially not the seller's fault. If you didn't fully understand these terms before agreeing/purchasing, you could have messaged Zeus to clarify if necessary.

It's gaslighting in that this thread is almost primarily about your situation with Zeus. And if you go through this thread you have people now believing that he edited his ToS in some way, when in actuality no one is to blame here but yourself. You're saying that this thread is meant to serve as a community alert about any/all users who are using shady terms do take advantage of their customers, but in reality you haven't outlined a single service/user/thread that's actually doing such things.

I came into this thread completely unbiased, and I still am. But I realized that Zeus honestly didn't do anything wrong in this situation, regardless of if he's a troll/dick around here/could have refunded you anyway. But I still think you have a really great suggestion for dealing with ToS in the future, and I think that's what you just need to take out of this situation dude.

In all fairness, that's not the incident that occurred. He was asking for a refund prior to the event occurring; thus, there was no event that happened where he did not "turn up".

Essentially, in the case of your own terms, he is valid for a refund. Had he PMed you something entirely differently as his justification for a refund (i.e. he doesn't know how to play Poker), wouldn't he be due for a refund, according to the terms that YOU set?

I never fathom why people waste so much time and energy tarnishing their own name for less than an hourly wage.

Honestly that's probably the only main point of argument for their personal dispute.

Personally when I read that line, I understand it as " if you don't (and can't) turn up, no refund"

But y'know that's completely personal. How I interpret it as, and what you, and anyone else interprets is different and subjective to ourselves.

I guess you'd be more correct in that we should interpret it, exactly as it's written (meaning im wrong/you're right)

But, Lrrr asking for a refund because he didn't fully realize the start time was just too early for him to wake up? How tf is that Zeus' fault?

Both sides suck here.

It's not, it's my own fault and It's what I agreed to.

My argument is the scummy TOS that is worded in a way that made me believe I was entitled to a refund UNLESS I didn't show up (i have done these toruneys before and sometimes people never show up)

I admit that I made a mistake and that it was in no way zeus's fault that I didn't read the time right....but that doesn't negate the fact that the TOS is not clear at all, nor is he being very fair at all and by his own TOS it does not effect the prize pool at all.

I can get behind you on that. He should've looked it over better and shouldn't have bought in the first place; although, that ship has sailed. Now we are at the point of response from Zeus. I'm gonna use the flight industry as an example.

If you book a 6am flight, and don't show up, you get no refund. (as per Zeus' ToS states)

If you book a 6am flight, and realize you CAN'T show up, well personally I don't know any airline that's going to give you your money back unless it's something urgent/severe/emergency related. They sure as hell aren't going to take "I didn't realize I booked my flight too early" as an excuse lol.

BUT I'd say in most cases any good airline (or hackforums user in this case) would offer their buyer a seat on a later flight (or poker game). Which is honestly something Lrrr asked for, and is reasonable, but personally idk Zeus or if this is something he hosts regularly? If so, I don't see the issue in that.

Also, they established that Lrrr could sell his seat to someone else, that seemed somewhat decent too, not like Zeus flat out gave him no option.

That's my take on this, move on however you see fit, but let the potential ToS suggestion be the takeaway out of this.

Whenever you post that thread Lrrr please send it to me, I think it's a great idea.

Lol I fly 30+ times a year (non covid), from the US/international, all airlines, you get the point, never ever been given a voucher or partial credit for missing my flight or having to rebook my flight, unless you're paying for some sort of insurance.

And i'm referring to non-covid times, cuz yknow a pandemic once every 100~ years is NOT the standard of reference.

And requesting a rebook on almost all airlines will cost you extra money in rebook fees so I don't see your point.

I get you on asking for entry into a future contest, that's more than fair. If he doesn't currently have any future contests lined up, or he doesn't host them regularly, I can see how that's inconvenient for him to just hold onto some lingering IOU for who knows how long, I assume that would be his reason of saying no.

From what I've gathered from other people, Zeus is not the crowd favorite, highly unlikeable, so were you expecting quality customer service upon dealing with him at any point I guess lol?

Everyone goes about handling their business and relations on hackforums differently, some are dicks and greedy more than others, and usually everyone knows who they are because it's very apparent. But in the wise words of Echo, We run a business not a charity.

Also I meant to say before him refunding you does affect the pot. It reduces everyone's winnings by $25 after people already made the assumption you were in. Not saying he should have to substitute your $25 personally, or that $25 less is a big deal at all, just that it does indeed affect the pot.

Maybe assuming you've paid extra for an insured/flex/refundable ticket? But basically any US airline if you're paying for either basic economy, or economy you have 24h from booking for free cancel, after that it's either strict no cancel/changing, or pay a rebook fee.

Contract was the same

However he actually did violate this contract since #1 states:

"This is a "lifetime" spot. This means you will remain in the Group as long as Zeus is the Group Owner."

He removed me right after payment, but as you can see at the time of me posting this, he is still the owner of the group.

But aside from that, I had asked if he would agree to compensating me for hardly being in the group 2 months (not to mention if I made any profit with the group name, I would automatically have to split it with Zeus and Trappy. Even if they have nothing to do with it) and Zeus had originally agreed to it..

He later messaged me again asking me for a response (since i forgot to respond) and I noticed he edited his message from $250 down to $200... So of course I called his ass on it but he at least admitted it..

Then even in the end, he still only sent $200, which I just settled with cause if anybody needs to try and pull a fast one for $50, they clearly need it FAR more than I do.

What kills me the most is the part when he says "We wont say shit behind backs and just str8 up" hahaha I am far more aware of what you have done AND said in the back-end in regards to our business deals. Telling people to go manipulate me to spend more, or that he was going to try and get away with not giving me back the full amount, etc.. Some kids are just so..... silly.

He removed me right after payment, but as you can see at the time of me posting this, he is still the owner of the group.

But aside from that, I had asked if he would agree to compensating me for hardly being in the group 2 months (not to mention if I made any profit with the group name, I would automatically have to split it with Zeus and Trappy. Even if they have nothing to do with it) and Zeus had originally agreed to it..

He later messaged me again asking me for a response (since i forgot to respond) and I noticed he edited his message from $250 down to $200... So of course I called his ass on it but he at least admitted it..

Then even in the end, he still only sent $200, which I just settled with cause if anybody needs to try and pull a fast one for $50, they clearly need it FAR more than I do.

What kills me the most is the part when he says "We wont say shit behind backs and just str8 up" hahaha I am far more aware of what you have done AND said in the back-end in regards to our business deals. Telling people to go manipulate me to spend more, or that he was going to try and get away with not giving me back the full amount, etc.. Contradiction at its finest

You are surprisingly stupid. Your own ToS says: "If you dont show up(...)". As he let you know in advance he couldn't make it to the start of the tournament, he has nothing to "show up to". If he came to you asking for a refund after the tournament, he didn't show up and was not allowed a refund.

Exactly the point that I made. He didn't "not show up"; thus, he didn't breach ToS. Easy evaluation of the, apparently legally binding, ToS.

I think with any "TOS", contract, or even laws.. there is sometimes loop holes for either side. It's up to the creator of such agreements to make sure that it's clear, concise, and direct. It's also in the hands of the recipient to review the agreement and make sure they fully understand. If you don't understand, ask. Or simply don't agree if you feel like you're gonna be defrauded in any way.

I'm sorry I'm so late to the discussion but I think that terms shouldn't leave room for confusion or immediately contradict any other statement in the terms.

I just don't understand how many terms I see on here that are so loose and the writers almost act like it's NOT securing the contentment of both sides.

I don't think I can agree with that. He's lazy and immature. In order to continue to maintain a lazy and immature lifestyle, he needs to take advantage of people. Conning people takes a degree of cleverness or finesse, sure, but overall the guy has no solid life skills, he's got no ambitions other than status on a lounge based forum. He is not smart. Once this guy stops coasting off of others, he's got a very rude wake up call lined up for him. This dude will not survive the real world the way he currently carries himself. Either he'll be an immature leach for life, or he'll eventually get the kick in the ass he needs to learn some applicable life skills.

Looking at a business perspective, you shouldn't be refunded.

I mean you agreed with the time the tournament would be hosted, meaning you were aware of the date and time.

On a 'HF friendly' level of perspective, you should be refunded.

$25 - $50 would be pocket change for some big business man like Zeus, but I can vouch for his pettiness.

He gave me my very first (and last) negative B-Rating, for literally asking him to "leave any rating" while he was "too high" to do it. Had a very toxic conversation and time with Zeus about that too.

It's pretty simple, after doing some routine checking and contracts research.

Zeus is the best leader, guy, businessman and member.. until he has to pay you or spent money or let his ego slide, he will be triggered like a crazy man. That doesn't mean he should refund you as the time isn't pleasing your schedule.

TL;DR: You should pay attention to the time before asking a refund. On the other hand, it's little money for a member like Zeus. Good luck solving this!

For whatever reason... Omni has been pretty lenient with Zeus.

Dating all the way back to when Zeus spent 2million glitched bytes and made Omni spend HOURS manually reverting 20+ awards and bytes. He got closed for a day or two, but Omni let him come back.

Then ever since then... he has been a much bigger headache than anything of value to the community. I'm fairly certain he will do some more dumb shit and be gone for good. Probably pretty soon.

more and more to the point there are more members than I have time to count, that he has been being scummy about contracts and pulling fast one's for quick cash. 1. You must wait 60 days before claiming your refund option

Just a way for the seller to hope buyer forgets about it and doesn't ask for refund.

2.Leaving unnecessarily negative feedback on Instant Income on any of the following sites; Hack Forums, Selly.gg, Rocketr, PayPal, is prohibited and will result in suspended access to the further support & updates, and no refund will be granted.

I am against Paypal chargebacks but negative feedbacks? thats just the opinion of the buyer and forcing it out of the hands of the buyer just makes the seller a scammer.

3.Please note that refund option will not be available if you're already familiar with the method. Feel free to ask me and and all questions before purchasing so it doesn't happen that you purchase something you already know. Thanks.

Gives a hint that most of the times the method is public.

There are alot of things wrong with those TOS and kids fall for it and nothing much wrong with that, we live in an asshole world and you make money quicker by being an asshole.

Funny thing I found is, that poker thread had TOS in spoiler, 1 sentence TOS had to be in spoiler. Its just a dirty strategy to make people not be aware of it. Same thing with the refund thread, TOS is in spoiler, thats okay, its very long but it should have been in the contract but its just not, all we have is Contract Terms

Its just a dirty strategy to make people not be aware of it. Same thing with the refund thread, TOS is in spoiler, thats okay, its very long but it should have been in the contract but its just not, all we have is Contract Terms

The spoiler tags used for things that don't actually need to be shortened is so scummy.

Vendors have 30+ quote vouches but spoiler hide 2 sentences....yeah man, real classy.

He wouldn't have needed to beg if you weren't a piece of shit to begin with.

Nobody ever said the rest of the marketplace is perfect, or even close to it. You're just the biggest shithead in it so you're catching flak first.

I also don't think you have any room to call anyone else "drama attention seeker." Take a fucking look in the mirror. Are you that out of touch with the type of person you are?

CPA Exposé - December 18, 2020, 6:58 am

That's why I consider the marketplace a one and done situation.

I buy and dont expect any chance of refund. It's a risk, a gamble. I don't trust anyone that much.

However, it is a pleasant surprise when some keep their word.
