Thread: What's one thing you've noticed since Covid?

Ivex - December 4, 2020, 12:29 pm

Self-explanatory, what's one thing you've noticed since Covid that you never realised before?

I'll start with a random thing I just noticed that's super obvious when I think about but I guess I just took it for granted. I had a massive headache, opened my windows fully for 10 mins, I felt fine. Never noticed just how important regular exposure to fresh, clean air is. I don't know how people who rarely leave their house and always have their windows closed don't get seriously ill.

I noticed what kind of jobs are worth & which aint

Forensic - December 4, 2020, 12:31 pm

That's interesting. I realized how important human contact actually is. You can go crazy without it.

Blogger - December 4, 2020, 12:44 pm

I've realized there are a lot of entitled pricks out there.

Dopamine - December 4, 2020, 12:47 pm

I noticed people are dumb as fuck.

TobiTee - December 4, 2020, 12:51 pm

I realised I sit in my arse a lot longer and miss my office desk

Haha yeah but I mean people are more dumb than before.

I've noticed that damn near everything sporting/outdoors related spiked in interest. I spend a lot of time fishing, out on the water, camping etc during the summer.

This past summer, kayaks were sold out EVERYWHERE, and were going for crazy prices on marketplaces etc. Most bait shops would have little to no inventory. Finding a camping site in my state was hard to find on weekends, every place was packed.

It was both awesome to see and annoying to deal with. It's great seeing interest in those things go up, but not so much when you can't find anything.

I noticed how impotant is to have side incomes and how much profit you can make just online people becoming more desperate to do crime because their welfare checks aren't cutting it.

Our welfare system has only increased due to Corona. Although domestic crimes are on the rise cuz of corona.

Before Covid I never knew for sure that there were this many truly stupid people and I am not young. I mean they may have seemed stupid to me but Covid proved they were beyond any doubt.

Psilocybinaut - December 4, 2020, 5:41 pm

The numbers are inflated, and people are going nuts about it. My family isn't even doing a Christmas time with just me my dad my son and my sisters. It's super sad, man. My sisters and mom are feeding off the proven to be fake news. I just want some time with my family, I haven't been free for a Christmas in quite some time. Maybe next year tho!

Snowwy - December 4, 2020, 6:57 pm

I've noticed that I fucking hate people (even more)

2xTheTap115 - December 5, 2020, 3:08 am in my case, it is important in hygiene to wash your hands, I know that it is a popular topic, but the most important one

In the earlier phases of covid, I noticed the immense amount of love for toilet paper by many people worldwide....

I noticed that i loveeee working from home, is so much better!! i really appreciate it!!

Deany - December 5, 2020, 7:38 am

One thing I noticed is that a mask is a good thing. Why? Not because of the virus, but to hide my ugly face!

Yeah, that has made me realize living in a city is not it.

????? ?????? ????? ?????? ?? ??? ??????

Demize - December 5, 2020, 11:27 am

How many ignorant people there are

Xerotic - December 5, 2020, 2:11 pm

I've realized that regular mask wearing while you are sick might actually be a really smart move. It's more common in some other countries, but I'd like to see US citizens regularly don a mask while they are ill. Imagine, with the slightest bit of consideration we could reduce the rate of sickness. COVID primed us into getting into the mask-wearing behavior.

TobiTee - December 5, 2020, 5:17 pm

People are way more vocal these days, literally sneezed earlier on public transport and I heard someone say " you need to be quietened" ??

A + - December 6, 2020, 12:52 am

Some people got lazy, it made me a little more productive. One thing that I haven't personally noticed but heard was it made a positive impact on climate change.

Lyralei - December 6, 2020, 1:24 am

That being isolated isn't such a bad thing after all.

ThisBearScat - December 6, 2020, 6:04 am

I have realised half the world is brainless and I'm better off isolating myself for the sake of my sanity and not having to deal with covidiot's than actually isolating to protect myself from covid ?

margaretkenney2000 - December 6, 2020, 7:01 am

I just noticed how hard to become a jobless. now Im about to become a homeless.

LoremIpsum - December 6, 2020, 7:05 am

A few things really;

< How they cut on budget of the 'hospital' staff first, and now it's a "critical job" with highest priority
< Deaths are almost all ignored, except the "COVID DEATHS!!!" which are heavily sponsored it seems

< How easily the majority of the people in my country and area believe what they are told, even if it contradicts the statements that were first made. For example, this forum is BLUE, after a week I claim it's RED and everybody agrees with me that it was always RED, never did anybody see it BLUE..

And some other things I rather keep for myself.

People are no longer looking for facts, but are being rewarded by fear triggers. FEAR your neighbour, FEAR the COVID, FEAR to infect others, FEAR to be looked at weird for not wearing a mask, etc., etc.

I've noticed that (at least where I am), the general public will comply to regulations put in place by our gov't. I mean, you'll see the odd person put up a fuss, but for the most part, it's been going well.

I noticed that I can no longer celebrate birthdays in my family, we were almost all born in November ... it was the 3rd birthday that we were unable to celebrate (Dec 6, 2020 02:24 AM)Lyrarei Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) That being isolated isn't such a bad thing after all. I like this one, I realised this too. At uni I was always wanting to go out drinking, go see my friends, talk to people during lectures/seminars, go to society events, go on dates or be dating someone but since lockdown in March I've had almost no socialising and it's not been that bad. Sure I want to go back to socialising but if anything the time alone has given me the ability to improve my life.

RTKN - December 9, 2020, 4:00 am

In our Country, no other illness just covid, haha even common cold considered covid.
