This surprises me less than a big corporation admitting they screwed up and giving money back unfortunately. Wow them trying to steal 2.4K is shocking. I guess they just get suspicious when people make too much though?

OP will you switch to Payoneer or something?

I've never used payoneer, is that a PayPal service? I'm interested in knowing about it.

It makes it look like you have a US bankaccount so if people want to pay you from America they understand it and will just pay into your account if you don't live in the USA- is how I understand it. I dunno I use it to get paid by Amazon.com because I don't live in a country they pay directly too and Amazon won't do Paypal.

But I have heard it's kind of a expensive compared to some other services that I don't remember the name of. Possibly if I'd gone with snail mail checks being sent to me I could have paid less fees which I have done with US companies in the past (they sent me snail mail checks across the world but that just always seemed so crazy to me.)

But the US company at the time refused to send money via Paypal after Paypal screwed them around. Then the last year that company was around they suddenly told me they weren't going with snail mail anymore and I HAD to get a Paypal account which was kind of funny because in the beginning when I wanted to get paid by paypal they said no because they'd had a fight with Paypal and then three years later they only wanted to pay by Paypal.

But anyway yeah I get paid via Payoneer as far as Amazon goes.

Thats extremely interesting. I'll have to look into it. Is being an amazon seller difficult?

If you are thinking of doing some business which requires paypal then go for a business account if not better leave it for now.

Lyralei - December 9, 2020, 8:45 pm

Woah, congrats, that usually doesn't happen, no?

flyingduck - December 11, 2020, 4:58 pm
