I assume you want to start with malware development? C C++ AutoIT VBS Batch are a good start, I specifically mention those for Windows OS, but I'm sure there's plenty more you can do. I am somewhat a noob and just got done developing a pretty fancy piece of malware by studying open source malware. I can only compromise PCs with Windows Defender, but that is soon to change. I came up with a subtle method to run my malware without making too much of a ruckus and getting too much AVs attention. Its a slow process BUT IT WORKS. I guess first, you have to think of what you want to achieve with your new acquired knowledge, then sail off on a project to polish your skills. Hackforums does a good job at leaking source code to people's malware LOL. I've come across some weird looking stuff searching lately. HAHAHA Hope this helped.

Hey edw4rd, looks like you figured out how to start spamming with your post here. Good work! Now just repeat it a lot. Maybe learn to type with both your hands and your feet so you can use two computers and spam twice as fast!

Stay right, stay white.
