Thread: Check out these wicked cool digital arts!

Cooligan - December 13, 2020, 2:04 pm

So me mucker flavoral was showing me something I never really knew about before; digital arts. And holy shit they're amazing so I decided to share them here with the HF community.

Here's an example of his work: (scroll down the page)

This guy made $582,000 in 5 minutes selling his art the other day:

It's incredible what he does with these images turned into digital arts, and he also makes short films some of which are comparable to professionally shot music videos.

A great example of one:

That's some of the weirdest, but also at the same time awesome things I've seen in a while.

Mr. Robot - December 13, 2020, 2:11 pm

I gurantee Flavoral found him from this video

Imao nah I found him like 5 years ago as a music channel called Proximity were using him as background for most of the videos.

I agree, what not to say about it, it's a really great animation and you have to pay respect to the guy for the effort he put in it

vad0x - December 13, 2020, 8:32 pm

thats nuts, his work is so sick too omg

Mind - December 13, 2020, 9:57 pm

His animations are out of this world. Thanks, Cooligan for sharing

Thanks for the share; I've never seen these before. I wish I had some money to throw around so I could get some for my office.

That's crazy man. Those are some really cool NFTs, the market for those things is huge!

The Amazing Sinner - December 14, 2020, 12:42 am

This is some dope ass art. I really like it.

Lyrarei - December 14, 2020, 1:11 am

So smooth, this probably took ages to make.

Forensic - December 14, 2020, 3:24 am

Yeah it's pretty cool not $582k cool but cool nonetheless

siddy357 - December 14, 2020, 3:50 am

That is kind of insane amount of money that he sold his art for.

Exalted - December 14, 2020, 5:20 am

He has made some sick digital art, whether the piece that went for $582,000 is 'worth it', I am not sure.

Goku - December 14, 2020, 5:43 am

Looks really awesome but not worth that price tag.

There are a ton of such quality animation and abstract 3D render on website like Behance.com and artstation.com

But oh well, I will never understand how rich people can spend such an amount for things like this. I rather spend the money to do it myself hahah.

The guy is more of a legacy at this point, been in the scene for about 10-15years, posting free content almost every day, and he inspired many people to start doing digital art who they themselves became big and working with big companies and big music artists.

He doesn't sell his arts 24/7, and mostly do limited copies. So when he does, people rush to buy it as a "thank you" for all his work through the years.

check this IG video to get a good explanation of what he was selling a couple of days ago exactly.

Its like people who buy over priced designer cloths, but they're actually supporting an artist with it too.

-snip-

I wonder why I don't know him tho, maybe I've seen stuff from him without knowing who made it lol. Reminds me of Banksy, I knew his art since I was a child but only when I became a teenager I would know who made it and understand his activism Actually, that's a good point. I guess I'm just stuck in that 'save the world', 'help the people' mindset. But I bet he does that too, but in his own way. Like bringing attention to such topics.

Almonds - December 14, 2020, 7:54 am

I remember reading about his debut - definitely some awesome work.

Chief - December 14, 2020, 7:55 am

Damn these are fresh. I like his style haha

Telstra - December 14, 2020, 11:46 am

Wow very cool cooligan thanks for sharing
