Thread: Let's see some EDC's

Haseo™ - December 17, 2020, 4:37 pm

How's it going everyone? So if you've never heard of "EDC" it simply means every day carry. Recently I've been stocking up on what I believe to be pretty nice tools. I want to see what everyone else carries around on a daily basis and if you'd like to add context as to why you carry something specifically then that's even better.

My man you have a nice setup. Sig saur .38 is an amazing edc. I plan to add the Kimber micro 9 Nightfall to my list here within a week or two.

Coco is a nice mod for salt nic.

Kershaw bad ass and Damascus at that even. I feel like I'm being flexed on lol.

Yeah I love the Sig. If I'm not carrying that it's my .45 1911 Kimber. Kimber makes such nice guns and I'm a huge sucker for a 1911. The micro 9 is a sweet piece also. Definitely should post it for us to drool over!

Nah mate, I'd call your response a perfect post. Was simply teasing but for real though wicked nice stuff and if you're proud of it then it's cool to show off your things.

Yeah I actually just obtained my cpl and started doing some shopping and it seems the general opinion is that Kimbers are high/top end just remember you're getting what you paid for, they're not cheap.

So at first I was skeptical because my majoras mask leather wallet is a normal sized wallet and the ridge is super small. However, it holds all my cards and has an option for money clip or money strap. I use the strap, it's honestly the best wallet not only because of RFID protection but you can sit all day long and not feel it.

I know it sounds like I'm sponsoring them now, and if you use my discount code "HaseoHF" you'll receive.... just messing.

I'm suprised to hear that though I've honestly never seen a ridge wallet commercial, I feel like I should look up some now.

I haven't. I may snag one though. Honestly I don't carry much cash so my strap is somewhat useless.

I feel that entirely all too well. I've maybe used the strap for cash 3 to 4 times and the other few occasions were when I would fold up a check to cash the next day. I don't think the clip would change the feel sitting with one much though.

The titanium is also wise as I never have to worry about being shot in the ass, unless of course it happens to be the other cheek. At that point though I'd start advocating for dual ridge wallet use. ?

I absolutely love the watch. The GPS works really well, even in places with little service. I set up a route before hand on Garmin Connect and it navigated me just like a phone's GPS, without a phone. And it tracked all the data. I can also navigate using lat/long, MGRS, etc on the fly on the watch. (Which I do use it for)

The GPS, Navigation, etc is great. I actually use it for both my work outs and my job, though.

The biggest selling point imo is the ability to use the Garmin ecosystem. They dumped a shit ton of money into Garmin Connect and I use it on the daily basis.

sorry for all the black boxes to remove landmarks, but this was a 13 mile hike I did. In an area with no real roads. it was able to navigate me to different points within a forrest and track it all.

This one is great. I respect you have the main essentials such as pen/writing pad. I really want to pickup a fisher space pen and a rite in the rain notepad. I want to pickup a zippo I'm just picky on the design I'll eventually get one. Your Kershaw is a pretty knife, they are a great brand. As for the coin (worry coin/stress coin/ect) I'm starting to see quite a few people with them, I kind of like the concept.

There was a time I never left my home without my handy dandy laptop. I don't really do any war driving anymore so it sits at home now mostly. I want to pickup a zippo for a lighter just incase I ever need reliable fire. Holy shit, I wasn't expecting it to be that good lol. Granted I've never looked into GPS dedicated watches, but that thing looks amazing.

It would be especially useful for my job as well seeing it's mostly driving, so it'd be wicked useful for places I don't know or frequent often so I can have a set route I take every time without the GPS rerouting itself because of traffic, or road work, a damn pothole, etc..
