Why is it native when it is coded in C#? What part of the executable are native?

I explained it in the FAQ. Since I used the .net Core Framework which allows me to include the runtime within the binary, no dependencies are needed.

How big is the binary though? Doesn't that add at least 10-50MB?

Yes, the binary is around 40MB. But I am offering a C++ Loader in combination with a .lnk exploit, so it gets downloaded and executed in the background and the Loader is only about 6KB of size and a .lnk file is 2KB small.

ZergB - January 10, 2021, 8:09 pm

Could you provide more detailed screenshots?

Also it would be great to see scantime and runtime test reports.

40MB payload? Can I inject this into a code-cave? Amazing compression, what did you use, Inflate?

I am trimming unused assemblies. It is not recommended to inject or modify the code during runtime.

I am not selling a builder, on purchase you will receive a executable + panel which is nested inside a docker container. So it is an easy one click setup.

Apollo Downloader is 600~ bytes, hell.. even Kardon Loader was 10kb...

How the hell is it 40MB without additional features?? Also, remove "Native" from the sales image...

It is 40MB because I included the runtime within the binary, through this it doesn't need any dependencies which is my definition of native i.e. (works on every system without installing additional frameworks, runtimes or libraries).

3xploit - January 12, 2021, 11:33 am

Seems interesting, but I don't quite understand why you would create a 45mb executable that includes the entire runtime to make it pseudo native if you could simply create a truly native exe that is below 50kb?

You also said that it's not recommended to inject during runtime. Does it use any injection routine or other protection mechanism by itself or is the registry entry the only persistence feature? Can the entry be viewed using regedit?

Aziz_Shavershian - January 19, 2021, 8:56 am

As there was a lot of confusion about the size of the payload. I am also offering a runtime-dependent version, which will be around 171 KB in size.

Keep in mind that you can spread the original version via my C++ Loader and .Ink Exploit in the same way, while not being dependent on the runtime.

But if people use it without a crypt it won't stay that way. You should require your customers to use a crypter instead of advertising against it.

Centerz. - January 30, 2021, 6:10 pm

Very good botnet but output file to big

__Digital__ - February 1, 2021, 9:53 am

A 40MB stub of course is going to remain fud due to the fact that Antivirus's have harder time scanning large files. Which will become resource intensive for end user, end user being the victim which would raise flags in general. Also on that note please do not ever randomly message me asking if i am interested in your garbage.

csrx - February 1, 2021, 3:12 pm

Looks nice, but i think, you need to get the size of the stub more and moooore little.....

drewkasp - February 1, 2021, 3:32 pm

40mb?.... this is unheard of...

Aziz_Shavershian - February 2, 2021, 2:11 pm

I know there a lot of complaints about the assembly size, but I am offering a way to get around this.

The C++ loader I created is only 9kb of size and is downloading and executing the main assembly in the background. So the only file you have to spread is the 9kb loader.

If you know C++ then why not just make a native binary in it?

I like both, but for this project I chose because I am making use of multi threading and this is much more efficient in C#. Furthermore I can focus more on the features and don't need to worry about memory management

SuperiorUser - February 18, 2021, 11:35 am this isn't sales trashing but here are a few things to consider panel seems to be a modified litehttp panel to some degree or used litehttp as inspiration. I was always a fan of the minimalistic modern look of litehttp and I have to admit the panel does look nice.

It's binary is massive in size, this is due to .NET core being shipped along with payload to run the file on pcs without .NET. this however is a horrible idea for malware.

seller claims persistence however we all know this is just startup.

seller claims that this bot offers "level of detail unmatched by any other bot." that's simply not true I can think of so many bots on the market that offer a higher level of detail.

I highly doubt the firewall bypass would work however it would be interesting to test.

The price of the bot is insanity to what it has to offer. There is simply nothing special there, I wish I would've had the ability to write a more detailed analysis on the bot however I'm simply not willing to spend 190 euros for something like this.

With that being said I would love to see future updates and see where this project goes. good luck.

I'm Stanley HF's helper bot. This OP (original poster) of this thread wants everyone to see this page and has elected to bump it to the top of the showthread listing. Since HF doesn't want a ton of LQP (Low Quality Posts) this is the best method of bumping your content. There is a small ?yte fee for each bump. Any OP can bump any of their threads on HF from the linked icon on the top of their first post.

If you haven't already read the first post of this thread we encourage you to do so.

Features coming:

- implementing more browsers for the stealer

Minor improvements:

- improved string obfuscation
- improved persistence

If you have any suggestions for additional features, I would gladly like to hear from you.

Thank you, that is what I wanted to achieve with my ZyzzyxLegacy Bot. An easy to use botnet with a lot of features, where the user actually enjoys the experience of controlling his net via the webinterface. Since I have a strong background in complexity theory and algorithm engineering, I also made sure that the functions are moving in a linear space and shouldn't exceed $O(n)$.

Yes, it is perfectly stable. There are non known issues when it comes to cmd execution. I have implemented dynamic API calls for further detection improvement.

(Jun 13, 2021 01:00 AM)Young Sosa Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) would already have bought that, but stub size is horrible

If you insist on it there are 2 solutions I can offer you:

1. As already said, I am offering a C++ Loader (stub size:~100kb) which downloads the main stub in the background and when its done executes it.
2. I can compile a runtime dependent main stub (size: ~3mb)

I explained you how it works, but do you really expect me to give you the source code? Despite, this has nothing to do with this sales thread, since you are not interested in buying. You ask how it worked, I explained you and then you are mad at me for not giving you the source code or showing you how to implement it? I really don't get it.

Right from the beginning of our conversation I told you, that "I am not offering any additional services", despite selling my bot. And that if you are not interesting in buying, you should abstain from contacting me. And no point in our conversation I was rude or disregarding.

I am always respectful and trying to give my customers the best of support. I am offering this community the possibility to acquire a high functional, state of the art, bot for a reasonable price, that is all. I really invested a lot of time into the development of my product, I am one of the few seller here on that is producing their own unique software instead of just copy&pasting everything together. But Members like you, expecting everybody to hold their hands and giving them guidance through every little step for free, really do make me want to leave this forum.

Sorry, for the long text, I just had to get this off my chest.

Anyways, I still wish you good luck and a have a nice day.
