Thread: Fakest Earnings Proof On HF \(-Elision- uid=1011943\)

Winds - December 20, 2020, 5:29 am

Hi everyone,

How is nobody talking about this?

?-Elision- isn't even trying to create a real earnings proof and it shows.

Creating fake earnings proof is one of the easiest tasks in the world, yet somehow you managed to fuck that up. I don't know if you're just really fucking dumb or you're so lazy to create a decent one and you give zero fucks.

Sales thread: <https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=6077384>

Proof: <http://prntscr.com/w6j2vt>

His earnings proof:

First off, if you have 4 figures or more in your PayPal account there'll be commas, so the real balance should be $2,169.76, not $2169.76. I know this because unlike Elision, I had four figures in my PayPal account at least once.

Now, the refresh is fake, Elision did a very well-known trick and the execution was terrible.

He downloaded the page by saving the html version of the page, and then he changed the balance, like this:

As you can see, there's no PayPal address because the page was downloaded. So he simply went to an editing software and pasted a screenshot of the real address to replace the fake one.

How do I know it's a picture? Because when Elision hovers his mouse over the fake image, his mouse disappears. That's because the image is over the real GIF.

Here you can easily see how he added the fake address.

Once again, I struggle to understand how anyone can fuck this up. Simply don't hover over the fake address and you're good. It just goes to show how dumb this guy is, no wonder he has 13 disputes.

How to find his profile ? I'm just wondering what was he selling. Also you did great job with finding out that scam.

reaand - December 20, 2020, 5:36 am

I bought the ebook like years years ago and i couldnt earn a single penny unlucky he cant refund.

And nice job you did man!

Same thread has been made about him like 2 months ago. Most eBooks have fake earnings so its not that surprising.

TheCrazyONE - December 20, 2020, 5:47 am

+ he has open deal disputes and gets one every day...
Its sad to see him lying to customers like this.

Yes, but he has 1810 completed contracts so he's little above 1% of disputed contracts. Sooner or later with that amount of deals you'll bump into some idiot that will want his money back and your product.

Not saying that he didn't scam or did but many people that have "autobuy contracts" or sell accounts and have thousands of contracts have disputes open for like $2-5.

Ivex - December 23, 2020, 9:46 am

Lmao this is funny. This is why you verify my friends. Or just don't buy anything that isn't clear what niche it's in. When the only selling point is that "it makes money" it won't make you money.

So is it allowed to fake earnings in order to mislead prospective buyers?

That is what it seems like based on your responses, I expected a little more recourse from a high-ranking staff member.

I guess you didn't read our Help Docs huh? Everywhere on the forum and in Help Docs it's stated that all deals are at your own risk. Before you initiate a contract with someone, it'll say that again. We provide tools and as much information as we can to help you decide before making a deal with someone. Usually sellers that are into shady business practices have a community alerts and/or deal disputes on their UID (user id). So by just searching the seller's UID with search function, you can see what they are up to.

If anyone thinks that you can earn $150 per day for $17 ONE-TIME PURCHASE, then god help them.

I'm glad you agree. What is stopping members who sell products to just use these deceiving methods in other areas of the marketplace other than eBooks?

I think it'd be better to bite these actions in the ass before they become widespread.

They're already widespread lol.

I'm guaranteeing you that 90% of users who sell money-making methods fake the earnings or reviews. Some of them actually do have money in their Paypal or Bitcoin and they post it as proof although they didn't earn that money from doing that particular method they're selling

And some of them simply just use inspect element and fake their earnings

There are quite a lot of them who create fake contracts with their friends as well. Then friend leaves a review making people believe method actually works.

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=6075414> Yes, there's no way it can be $1357,63.

First off, commas before decimal numbers are ONLY in EUR.
Second of all, there's always a comma separating the 4 figures whether you got EUR or USD.
It's probably his multi.

@Eagle 95@ Can you check if this guy is his multi? Would make a lot of sense if it is, because like Elision, he as well doesn't know how to fake earnings.
