Thread: The Evolution of the Art of Ewhoring- My Current Thoughts

TheGrayFox - December 26, 2020, 8:59 pm

This post is just a brain bouncer. I think the days of finding even the sparse individuals from chatrooms who would pay for pics or even vids are all but in the past. These people at this point in time fully expect to find requests for donations when they log in to these rooms. But we need to realize that realistically 99% of these people who log in have absolutely no intention or desire to mess around with the technicalities of paypal or any other sort of program that pauses or delays their sexual gratifications. It's just not viable any more.

What Ive been thinking lately is that we have to shift our focus elsewhere. To a non sexual environment and turn it sexual by our own ewhore. We need to get the "mark" completely obsessed with our ewhore.

Giving a lot of thought to social engineering lately and putting myself in the "mark's" shoes. I feel like there is yet vast untapped resources out there, but we need to be the ones to start their craving. We just can't waste our time being just another fleeting donation inquiry. Start the chat somewhere else. Completely different topic. Perhaps message people from the comment section on various forms of social media? Compliment something about their profile pic to start things off?

This post is just a way of bouncing my thoughts on to the keyboard. I can come back to this to make sure my mind stays on track.

You can definitely do this but it's the long game and it requires patience and time.

Since September, I've been ewhoring a little to try out new techniques. Covid-19 has made men lonely and desperate for any type of connection. Especially the ones that were used to getting women easily. They are easy targets for any type of communication. I've also seen some of my students (real women) make a lot of money by doing GFEs (Girlfriend Experience) and there are two that don't do anything sexual. It's just texts and Snapchat/Whatsapp/Telegram. I already knew that you could make money by just talking and if the pandemic lasts even longer, the opportunity will grow.
