Thread: [\[Final Dose\]Anyone else get their vaccine yet?](#)

Tjm - January 14, 2021, 9:40 pm

Got the Moderna COVID-19 first dose vaccine 1/14/21 . No side effects yet so far, maybe a little tired. It's only been 6hrs though. I have bad asthma and all the ventilators in my local hospital are occupied plus the place is understaffed. Managed to get a spot a couple hours after the email came. Took about an hour to even load the page.

Has anyone else gotten either of them?

Update: Just got final shot 3 hours ago. I guess some people puke, most have fever/full body aches/headache. My doctor said it sucks but went away after a day. Probably will come in and post a general update on my side effects and how I'm feeling.

Day after

Last night about 3:30am I started to feel a little shitty. Woke up around 11:30am feeling like I had spent the day before at the gym. Just muscle/joint soreness. Had some chills but mostly feel fine right now, been slowly going away. Had some weird dreams though.

Day 3

Slept like 10 hours last night, body is sore, still really tired. Nothing horrible though.

2/16- Unless I get cancer or some crazy shit this is the last update. Been drained to hell the last few days. Slept again last night for like 10 hours, missed my doctors appointment. Also screwed myself and forgot to check in for the lounge and messed up 60 days into the award goal :/ But feel mostly back to normal energy wise.

This vaccine also includes the CACP federal program to pay for costs of medical complications from the vaccine, so if I have any medical related issues from it I can file a claim for injury. My friend to me the pfizer one is way more brutal.

My friend just got his, even after being declined the first time.

Damn. Yeah my town just opened up the next phase group. Been doing the new stage for the last 3 days, 80 people per day. They gave is a little check in site/text surveys that just asks how you're feeling...But if you feel really shitty the CDC has to torch your body ? Yeah my town you had to bring the proof in person of your status.

Yes it has side effects. I have friends in Germany and Poland and they are in very bad health now after the vaccine.

When will be the next dosage for your shot?

Here in our country maybe by next month some of the priority people will be able to get their first dosage of shot but for us just a common people maybe we can get it by mid of this year.

This. Honestly I'll wait too, I don't trust it either. There was a case in my family where someone died just after the vaccine.

No way I'll take it.

My sister had to because she works at a hospital. She said it's not too bad. The area was a little painful for the first day and she was tired for the first day. After the first day, she was fine. She just got her second dose and the same thing.

I'm glad to hear it went smooth, I won't be taking it though. I honestly believe it was released too fast and some people have had some pretty severe reactions from it.

Only time will tell though, stay safe!

Utility - January 15, 2021, 7:05 am

I'll get it once there's been testing on the long and short term effects, otherwise no point. Had Covid twice, it was nothing more than a slight cough and a headcold for me.

Yeah I thought I'd be in the 1A category with my medical issues and job but got the notification 3 days into 1B. It's hard too with side effects, like everyone is aware of it being experimental so you have the psychological aspect playing into how you're feeling.

It's funny you say that. Just moved a week ago out of my old apartment filled with black mold.

Never realized until I started moving stuff more. A ~4x2ft section of ceiling was ready to cave in. Gotta start working out again, the asthma went away naturally when I was fit.

Same here. I work with some teens who had that ruined for them last year. Glad I ended up stocking up on N-95 respirators. My job, like most, gave us cloth masks but that doesn't do shit when you deal with people regularly who refuse to wear one. Cause I'm VIP....kidding, but I'm in the 1B qualifications list. Just around people non stop and pretty bad asthma. Anyone can get it if they work like retail or in person tutors for example in NYS. I just managed to sign up the afternoon I saw the notice. Just kept trying the links to all the ones in NYS doing it and finally after an hour found an "event" that wasn't full.

Someone must have cancelled or they added the spots slowly. Just autofilled all my information and got a registration sheet with an appointment time. Only other person I know that's getting it is my coworker who has her first shot on feb 1st. I get my booster shot feb 11th.

They mention in the notice to be prepared to drive long distance and wait months to get a signup spot now. Feel fine today. They have you bring proof that you qualify like paystubs or letters from your job. Also have to fillout some other stuff.

Damn, we have a few vaccine sites in my small city, if you can even call it that. Probably depends on location, up where I live the population is tiny compared to some places but 3/4 of the jobs are federal prison/medical/nursing/retail jobs. I'd be worried being older and getting it though.

Right now half the people where I work are scheduled to get it end of the month. Obviously a bunch of people are rightfully skeptical because they rushed the process.. But being high risk medically in a high risk job with the hospital full, fuck it. I've almost died from my asthma, and have to carry around an inhaler at all times because it's a life necessity. If I didn't have that I'd wait to get it to make sure the benefits greatly outweighed the negative.

Pretty much are the human trials lol. People are desperate and lining up for it even with the risk. Only kills a fraction of people. I know people who got a runny nose and lost their taste and smell,

For Moderna? I heard about people claiming the Pfizer CEO refused it but:

"Pfizer CEO Albert Bourla said he hasn't received his company's Covid-19 vaccine shot yet, telling CNBC that he and other executives will not "cut the line."

While Bourla's company developed the vaccine, he is not a frontline health-care worker himself. He said he's also 59 and in relatively good health, so it's not entirely appropriate for him to receive the vaccine before other people who need it more."

I have bad asthma and all the ventilators in my local hospital are occupied plus the place is understaffed. Managed to get a spot a couple hours after the email came. Took about an hour to even load the page.

Has anyone else gotten either of them? What made you decide to get it? Any side effects at all so far? I'm just curious to how everyone else is reacting?

This vaccine also includes the CICP federal program to pay for costs of medical complications from the vaccine, so if I have any medical related issues from it I can file a claim for injury. My friend to me the pfizer one is way more brutal.

Interesting to know they have a program for complications. It will be needed. :(

Yeah none of the symptoms lasted. The next shot is the one I heard sucks, since you prepped your body for an immune reaction. I'm taking that day and the 2 days after off. I go back there this Thursday for it.

Where I live older people are getting it first. I don't mind since I work from my apartment and my aunt isn't old enough to be in danger because she doesn't have diabetes or anything like that. I still help her with groceries since she's the one who looked after me after my parents died. My uncle also died a couple of years ago so she's pretty much my only family left.

Besides, I don't usually get sick. I have high immunity I guess.

SerotoninMaster - February 7, 2021, 7:50 pm

To be real I am kind of weird about getting a vaccine. This has gone for me with really anything ; my mindset is if it isn't broken don't fix it. With me being in my mid twenties and still not having a kid just yet, but knowing in the future I most likely will be having a kid leads me to issues with the vaccine. I personally feel that since I am young its best to not add garbage into my body and have a natural , healthy , young body so when I have a kid he is natural and healthy with out all these chemicals and garbage that could potentially cause brain defects our what ever else we don't yet know since the vaccine has been so recently released.

For me if I was going to get the vaccine I would wait a few years, wait until after I have children and make sure that my babies are healthy before I inject myself with something that isn't natural and honestly seems like a form of population control. For years the government has used weird methods of killing people off in the world and I think this is just one of there other methods. See what happens with a slight sickness, no on really knows what's in those shots. Truth is you really never will to be honest its just trusting the doctors more and more. The same places that have been creating sicknesses for years and the only thing changing is how smart they are getting with ripping more and more people off year by year.

If I was to say truthfully. I wouldn't get this vaccine unless you currently have health issues. If right now your living condition is already a risk and your flipping a coin living everyday then go ahead and take this vaccine shot. But, if you look at statistics you will see the flu cases have dropped, if anything there are no flu cases just covid, there are no strep throat cases just covid, there are no pneumonia cases just covid. And what that all leads to be believe is that covid is getting hyped and hyped up because more and more money is funding this con that's going on and more people are dying of covid then car accidents, then gun shots, then suicide, the murder, then all these other ways of dying that it really doesn't add up.

See, I would believe what was going on in the world if we actually had enough people in those areas claimed to have that many people sick. If that many people were sick in certain locations we'd all of had covid. That's why to me getting the vaccine is putting yourself more at risk then ever because you are now allowing them to inject you with something deep into your blood stream. Not worth it to me.

Hopefully it does. It would be hard to know with the quarantines that happened how much truly cleaning and hand washing cuts back on other viruses and bacteria. Like if everyone kept that habit and life returns to normal again how much of a reduction would we see in all other illness.

To be honest it would probably be a really good improvement to overall health, I recall seeing that they started cleaning subways more frequently which I was surprised to find they cleaned them before at all. Not to mention people who used to not wash their hands now washing them probably increased overall sanitation.

You know what would be cool though, if you could set a timer, so regardless of how you end up feeling in that person's mind/personality, you switch back after two hours like in Animorphs lol. That would just be a total miñdfu*k. Like a total ego death and then you don't exist anymore, then you're living as another person, then back again to yourself. Would be scary to me if you added full loss of yourself into it. Would be like dying, reincarnating into another person for a couple hrs, from a certain moment in time, with all their memories and conscious self, then all of a sudden back to you. Just a Buddhism reincarnation 10x XP event.

I think Pfizer is the only one we have here. I had to have some blood tests done on Friday so I asked the blood test lady if she'd had hers and she said she had it in May and got a head ache for one day and had flu symptoms for two days but then was fine. Not that many people have had it here yet.

You aren't supposed to be taking it because you're scared of dying from Covid it's to get rid of the virus so it doesn't kill all these other people they're asking you to do an altruistic act. You are much more likely to have long term side effects from Covid19 than from any vaccine though. Even if you get mild easy Covid you can potentially get long term bad side effects.

" final shot " how's that feel OP.

1. Doesn't stop Covid transmission.
2. Barely stops you from having worse symptoms.

3. As it wasn't an actually effective vaccine, all it does is make the virus evolve in your stronger system making it more deadly for others.

It, It, It aside from anything else you sound like you don't know what you're talking about since you're trying to pretend they're all the same vaccine. You provide no links.

Diffrent vaccines are showing different rates of effectiveness against different strains of the virus but many are estimated to be in the 80 to 90% ranges of effectiveness.

First of all the link, you provided tries to cover the fact the Vaccine hasn't been FDA approved, just "authorized"

Pfizer:

95% efficacy in preventing COVID-19 in those without prior infection.

Moderna:

Also, the Moderna vaccine was slightly less effective in clinical trials—about 86%—in people who are 65 and older.

Johnson & Johnson:

How well it works: 72% overall efficacy and 86% efficacy against severe disease in the U.S.

There is no evidence to show that mRNA vaccines are safe, yet there is evidence to show that these vaccines listed above can cause other issues. Thus showing they are not fine tuned.

If it were a normal vaccine, there are expected side effects - but when I edit my registry on my computer, I can't do one thing correct then another line incorrect and expect it to work properly.

Same applies to coding in general if you need a better understanding.

Sometimes when fixing an exploit such as an overflow, you end up leaving other vulnerabilities in its place. Things that are much more severe if taken advantage over.

Now when we escalate that to mRNA - RNA is defined as:

Ribonucleic acid is a polymeric molecule essential in various biological roles in coding, decoding, regulation and expression of genes. RNA and deoxyribonucleic acid are nucleic acids

Messenger RNA (mRNA) is a single-stranded RNA molecule that is complementary to one of the DNA strands of a gene. The mRNA is an RNA version of the gene that leaves the cell nucleus and moves to the cytoplasm where proteins are made. During protein synthesis, an organelle called a ribosome moves along the mRNA, reads its base sequence, and uses the genetic code to translate each three-base triplet, or codon, into its corresponding amino acid.

I dont think I will ever get the vaccine lol

I had Pfizer. I'm a 25 year old in the UK. 1st dose 8 weeks ago, 2nd dose 1 week ago.

Absolutely would not even know I had the vaccine except minor tension at the injection site.
