Title says it all - do you carry? Concealed/open?

I concealed carry a 9mm; Mossberg MC2c.

SIM-3205632 - January 24, 2021, 12:09 am

Hope you're not one of those people who shows it in public aswell.

guardian - January 24, 2021, 12:58 am

Gun laws in my country are pretty strict. I don't own any real gun, only a P22 that shoots tear gas and is as loud as a real gun. Never had to use it though. Only carrying it concealed, because of the laws and I also don't see a point in carrying it open, although I don't look like the guy that would just randomly start shooting out of his gun. I shot a few real guns before though, M16, Colt Government, Benelli M4 and a Smith and Wesson Revolver, do not remember the exact model. In the future I will surely get my gun license so that I can go sport shooting.

Isolate - January 24, 2021, 1:43 am

I choose to carry but although I live in a state with open carry I do not do it as I feel your just asking for trouble if it finds me so be it but I'll never go in search for it.

SIM-82498 - January 24, 2021, 1:52 am

I wish I was able to where I'm from.

?Dødggygeez - January 24, 2021, 2:15 am

I carry these big balls around all day and that's about it.

Nima304 - January 24, 2021, 8:23 am

Not that I could get a concealed carry where I live (it's really hard), but I also wouldn't want to carry a gun on me all the time. I just don't want to have to be "on" all the time (those who know, know). I carry a couple of knives instead.

webdev77 - January 24, 2021, 8:47 am

I would put the P365 as one of the best concealed options on the market right now. Not necessarily the best, but one of. Full size options don't work very well in warm weather due to sweating defeating the point of concealment.

Unless you are backpacking out in the middle of nowhere or intentionally trying to make a statement, there is little reason to open carry (unless it's illegal to conceal carry, but that's a whole different issue).

shakur123 - January 24, 2021, 8:57 am

In my country is not allowed to carry weapons, you can buy them but only for sports and house defense. I dont think im the type of person who can carry a gun, im just to "jumpy" with my body language, im afraid i can end up with a bullet in my ass hehehe

K1. - January 24, 2021, 9:02 am

All I carry is the team on one shoulder and someone's girl on the other... no need for a pistol although there is a few occasions it could have come in handy I guess

You guys are lucky that you're allowed to carry at-all, defend yourself over here and your catching atleast 5 years lool we live in a meme of politics around weapons

?itcoin - January 24, 2021, 2:35 pm

My country doesn't allow people to carry guns but even if it did I probably wouldn't, i don't know.

Someone once said on a podcast, if they carried a gun they would feel more confident to put themselves in certain situations, and I agree.

I'm already somewhat confident when it comes to fighting if I have to, and I'm not the type of guy to back away, if I carried a gun then if there was a situation that could scare me instead of walking away, I would probably "defend" myself when there was no need to.

I feel safer without carrying and with a country that doesn't allow people to carry

Koyote - January 24, 2021, 2:37 pm

We aren't allowed handguns in my country, however shotguns are allowed in areas where it's suitable and providing you have a license. It's funny because you can spend all day in an area here where people have shotguns over their shoulders as casually as if it's a scarf, and yet if they walked 30 minutes into the next town with it it would cause a major incident and armed police would be called. Crazy laws.

>concealed carry

As others have stated, I also live in an open-carry state, but I do carry concealed. The point is not to look or feel like a badass. The point is lethal force for protection.

Neon™ - January 24, 2021, 4:02 pm

I don't because laws are way too strict over here.

If you ever do pick up a full size option the p320 x5 legion is one of the nicest shooting handguns I've owned. I've ran 3 gun tournaments for a couple of years now and swapped between a few "competition" style handguns and the p320 x5 legion and the cz75(sp-01) are my go to. Although I'm saving for a cz shadow 2 so I might sell my 75.

A + - January 24, 2021, 5:49 pm

No, I'm wanting to get a license soon though.

SIM-3833886 - January 25, 2021, 12:19 am

I open carry everywhere I go. I only conceal carry when I feel I have to. I want people to see it. I want people who might commit a crime to see it. Some people feel uneasy, they don't understand. Some people ask why I carry, to which I respond, "I carry not only for my protection, but for the protection of everyone around me". For those who have bad intentions, seeing my gun may dissuade them from committing a crime. At the very least, it makes me the primary target. If there's an active shooter or someone about to become one, I want his attention and focus on me..... not the 10 year old boy, not the pregnant mother, not the family doing their shopping. I want him to engage with me. If nothing else, it will give those civilians around me a few seconds to seek cover. But I'm disciplined and trained. I, unlike the active shooter, am not a Canadian coward. I will engage him and will not let him succeed. My advice.....to everybody....buy a gun, get trained, get licensed and carry it always. And don't let politicians and the media convince you that gun control is the answer. Gun free zones are the most dangerous places on earth. I do not conform. When only the government has guns and not the citizens, it becomes tyranny. We are the last stand of the free world. Be vigilant.

FogFox - January 25, 2021, 5:39 am

Laws in my country are pretty strict are you are not allowed to have a gun on you. So no.

Vitani's Mate - January 26, 2021, 1:04 am

Carrying a weapon in my country is considered illegal and if you're caught.. You will be fucked.

Givenchy - January 26, 2021, 9:48 am

Thank god we aren't allowed to have guns in my country. That would bring much more violence.

I concealed carry a 9mm; Mossberg MC2c.

I don't wear it at all because I live in Europe and the gun will not be of any use to me here??

Fellow Man - January 26, 2021, 11:57 am

I always conceal my .22 Walther... Has never failed me!

Think it might be England. You will get bagged for possession of a weapon including a knife /firearm

FlowerontheMoon - January 27, 2021, 5:18 pm

Nope, laws are very strict over here..... so maybe have some airsoft...

VUEDUE - January 27, 2021, 5:48 pm

Ruger Security 9MM at the moment. 15 in the clip, one in the chamber. Not a bad EDC imo.

jecoylecoy - January 27, 2021, 5:53 pm

It is not allowed to carry in my country, even if it is I think I will now do unless necessary.

Who Soup - January 27, 2021, 5:57 pm

I don't carry but the people around me do

Stork - January 27, 2021, 5:58 pm

I live in Canada so it's not allowed here I would if I could though.

It is not legal in my country so no.

ghostboy - February 3, 2021, 2:23 am

Not at the moment but I do plan to when im off bond

W3BeastCoast - February 6, 2021, 9:52 am

Damn, I wish this was an opportunity, had my gun rights taken from me from a felony bail jump charge I recieved.
