

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Disallow the creation of contracts where the linked thread is closed.

Exalted - February 13, 2021, 12:31 pm

A small suggestion, but a great QOL-improvement.

Don't allow the creation of contracts where the linked thread is closed. Also, I would suggest automatically removing or disabling the "Start Contract"-button on thread closure.

P.S: @Staff, if you could remove the "Start Contract"-button from my closed thread, that would be great.

Lynx - February 13, 2021, 12:34 pm

You have my support on this one.

Had this happen to me a couple of times.

Would be great if the button is automatically removed on closure of a thread.

Maybe even make it so if someone were to create a contract with the thread as parameter, prevent creation of the contract and show a warning message.

Blogger - February 13, 2021, 1:07 pm

I know a lot of sellers will open and close their threads, but that's actually a really good suggestion. It's so quick to add a contract to their thread if/when they reopen them.

Morty Smith - February 13, 2021, 2:16 pm

Seems like a tight addition imo. While I currently do not use the function, I could see the positive implications of this

Malthemar - February 13, 2021, 3:03 pm

I think removing the contract button on closed threads is a great idea.

Utility - February 14, 2021, 6:27 am

Technically speaking if you allow it and vendors are still using it as a way to make money because unaware customers, it's an easy way to see who's a dirtbag or not.

However the addition is a great idea and will improve the QoL of newer or new users perusing the marketplace.

Eagle 95 - February 14, 2021, 7:59 am

Basically, you want us to change the policy which isn't going to happen.

<https://hackforums.net/misc.php?action=help&hid=35>

Quote:All sales threads are required to have a Contract button in the first post.

Just deny the contract, is that so hard? Some sellers use closed threads to conduct business, too.

Omniscient - February 15, 2021, 10:48 am

Some sellers prefer their thread closed but remain to keep the Contract open.

