Thread: The evolution of newly "woke" songs

Exalted - March 13, 2021, 11:20 pm

Good morning. I just woke up and saw this The Daily Wire IG-post and had to share it. Lol.

Would be funnier if we weren't watching society crumble into a feminized tyranny.

True, crumbling society is horrible, but it does provide good fucking content. Worth it? Nah.

That is horrible, it pisses me off to see how fragile people become and how the majority is folding to the wishes of the few...

seriously, why should songs be changed or whatever? I've got a mom and dad, if I want to, I'll sing about my mom and dad, if I had two dads, I'd sing about my dads, get over it...

trying to force people to change the fucking words they use so it'll fit you? fuck you!

I think we need a purge, the sooner the better...

I wish it was only songs, but wherever I look I see more and more garbage. It's sad but it is what it is. We can go on and on and on on this topic and will still get nowhere. Juoku got it right with the "fragility" of people nowadays... brilliantly made video btw OP, thanks for sharing!

People have always been fragile. They used to go crazy when people swore back in the day. Eminem used to get thousands of protesters for his lyrics.

Yeah but now they're somehow the focus of everything, making changes to movies, songs and what not... I think we should start a counter movement banning and boycotting shit Exactly this. We need freedom of expression, and this is the kind of stuff that ruins it for everybody.

I wish it didn't happen at all. Don't 'rewrite' music/history in general; it's idiotic.
