

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Payment Methods to substitute PayPal

Iconical - March 15, 2021, 8:46 pm

my paypal just got banned due to a weirdo sending as g&s and charging back while calling me a hacker and saying I sell cracked steam accounts - :facepalm:

Therefore Im looking to expand my payment methods - I currently accept
CashApp
All crypto

UnderBot - March 15, 2021, 10:39 pm

I'd personally avoid Venmo. There's a lot of fraudulent payments using Venmo, which you'll find out very fast. Best recommended to avoid it overall, regardless of how much traffic is seeking to use Venmo.

I've heard some about Zelle, but if I remember correctly it's the same with Venmo.

On the other hand, I'd like to hear what other people have to say, and what is actively being used to trade with.

Iconical - March 16, 2021, 2:32 am

Anyone know any that are safe to use and not as bad as gaypal

Big E - March 27, 2021, 3:12 pm

Skrill is good because of the payments being pretty much irreversible except for in cases of obvious fraud. No dispute BS there.

However, PayPal isn't all bad of an option if you can find a way to abide by the TOS. It sounds like you can't. But nobody should have any major problems with PayPal if you're selling goods or services legitimately that abide by their TOS.

Mark Ronson - March 27, 2021, 3:33 pm

Crypto is the best, cashapp is better than the others, maybe Zelle/Apple pay. Depends on what you're selling and where tho

TB12 - March 28, 2021, 12:13 am

Skrill or Stripe may be a good alternative

Ombra - March 28, 2021, 2:39 am

Personally I gave up with Paypal 2 years ago. Since that time I only take crypto currencies and I'm glad to instruct my customers about getting crypto with their CC / PayPal then use them to pay me.

Customers learn about crypto -> Sellers make money safely.