Thread: Vegeta got robbed in Resurrection F

TB12 - March 29, 2021, 9:00 pm

In the end of Dragon Ball Z Resurrection 'F' Vegeta got robbed of killing Frieza with that bullshit writing. Vegeta deserved to finally get his chance to finish off Frieza after everything Frieza had done to him. But of course Goku has to save the day as always and the Writers decide to allow Frieza to instantly blow of the planet killing everyone including Vegeta besides the other main characters, and then reversing that in literal minutes thanks to time travel. Then Goku steals his kill and of course Vegeta's pissed.

But seriously why do all that crappy writing just to rob a character of a victory they truly deserve and earned. Why does it always have to be Goku in the spotlight.

Resurrection F was meant to be a setup movie for Dragon Ball Super. Akira Toriyama wanted Frieza back in the picture. He becomes important in the Tournament of Power arc as a supporting character, and a key villain in the sequel movie to Super. He is also being heavily villainized in the new arc in the manga. From what I hear, Vegeta is also getting some proper love in the manga right now.

I understand that all but that's not what I am complaining about. It should of been Vegeta killing Frieza in Resurrection F. It's good to know Vegeta is getting proper love right now though :)

I swear to god, if Frieza dies again, he better be killed by Vegeta.

Stopped watching Dragon ball, just because same thing (goku saving the day) again and again.

Eh, Super kind of changed that, though he's still heavily, heavily involved in the end result.
