Hello everyone,

I started hacking one year ago and I have some knowledge in this field, I also learned Python, HTML and CSS and started C++ recently...

I'm here today to find people like me, who are in love with stuff like that (hacking, programming ...), and who begins, just like me.

We could share our knowledge about this, and eventually start some business ;).

PS: I speak French and also Russian too, so if you speak one of those languages, don't hesitate, I would be happy to chat with you :).

With kindness, from an anonymous friend on internet.

Knowledge:

Python: 7/10

HTML & CSS: 6/10

SQL injection: 3/10

Linux terminal: 6/10

Kali tools: 6/10

Social Engineering: 6/10

C++: 3/10

Russian: 7/10

French: 10/10

English: 5/10

Spanish: 3/10

Well one tip I can give you beginners is to define your goals.

Get a good framework of what a hacker is, which knowledge you must possess.

There should be a tutorial on how to become a penetration hacker somewhere in the tutorials section.

Hacking requires a lot of reading. Start with increasing your surface-level knowledge on various subjects and afterwards delving into the deeper ends of python. If you've no idea of how back-ends/front-ends work or what this even means, or what a reverse-shell is, there is no point in improving your python specifically if you get what I mean.

Just joined, so wanted to hop on the beginner bandwagon. Hopefully there is a discord room for us to converse in as well, but I'm a bit more green in the sense that i'm studying Python and HTML5.

My goals are just to understand the tools and the impact that someone can have when they have impacted your device, so that I can fine tune my ability to help people clean their phones. I work in a cell phone repair shop!

I am rather new to the scene also. Started in pentesting about 2 years ago so ive got some skills and maybe average understanding of methods and basics. I am not in IT as a profession but every moment of my free time is spent doing CTFs and learning python, bash, and powershell scripting. It is a passion to say the least. I am really interested in meeting people of like mindset and passion. DM me and lets colab!!!!!!!!!!!! I look forward to hearing from you.
