Thread: 50 Posts minimum for Money tab.

BaldCunt - April 12, 2021, 1:58 am

I see all these people posting their sh*t/scam coin in the cryptocurrency section and more over in the referral tab.

All newbies with no avatar and neg popularities.

Maybe putting a post minimum to create a thread will prevent LQ - Advertisement threads. ??

I'd be in favour of introducing some kind of requirements for posting in some of those sections, even relatively low ones, just to try and weed out some of the crap a bit better.

I know this has nothing to do with this topic specifically, and I know everyone's gonna totally disagree with me here. But the E-Whoring section is becoming annoying with newbies just posting stuff like "Someone add me on discord and run me through every step ever", gets old real fast, definitely think there should be a minimum post in the introductions and maybe lounge area before you can post there, some sort of hurdle.

Honestly majority of the shit, "eBooks" or "methods" posted in there are about Coinbase Earn. It's pretty easy to tell if something is Coinbase or not so don't be upset because you fell for another Coinbase tutorial, there's still a lot of HQ stuff produced by members with less than 50 posts so I'd deem it unnecessary. I'm pretty sure majority of the forum is full of leeches who skim these sections for "guides" and content like this, or similar anyways.

I think it would at the very least lower LQ threads and spam. I support this

The amount of people who pop up in the marketplace overall, with no posts or only posts asking for trials/vouches, is more annoying me atm. Most selling cracked accounts or stolen without much consequence. Especially when they post their discord all the time; something I got reported for enough to piss me off to see no-posters not being warned.

By the time their spam surfaces, usually a few days have passed, allowing them to bypass that rule without being able to report the post :/

I'd say this is a bad idea. The crypto section particularly gives way for bringing in a ton of new members to be active. I've thought of telling my irl friends to join this forum just to read the crypto section.

Limiting sections to posts is almost never a good idea imho.

not to post a post.
but to create a thread.

I don't mind LQ post,. damn I sometimes make it myself.
but those people spreading fake/shit/scam coins and advertising their "methods".

Yeah sorry I should have read the OP slower. I think this is a good idea then.

So let me get this straight.

To avoid the LQ users from posting in the Money section, you want 50 LQ posts elsewhere? You're trying to fix a problem by creating another one.

To avoid LQ threads.

It's easy to ignore posts.?

I personally believe that members will post even more LQ stuff to get to that "minimum post count".

Even though my Thread states clearly how to download the ebook.. members will post without reading the content.

A great example (one of the many);

If their Discord isn't verified then report the post.

And I'm always in Crypto Currency forum so there isn't really that bad of a quality problem. I often close those threads and sometimes just Junk them too.

Enough policies are in place to deal with these issues.

More Gun Control doesn't stop people from having guns. More policies doesn't stop people from posting crap.

Welp the Omni spoke.

Closing the thread.
