

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Ruby really slipped up this time. Requesting help.

RubySlips - April 17, 2021, 3:10 am

So I met someone and we started working on some projects together. We had this really instantly strong and good vibe together. I dunno, in hindsight I see it was me falling for him and maybe him a little for me. One night he was talking about how his phone had been hacked and I said "that sucks" But he said no its good its my friend. He went on to explain the basics of how it gets started. Gain access to someone's gmail and send an email to some particular address.

At some point a few days later he brought it up again and I was curious about it and here's the first place I slipped up. I challenged him to try to do it to my phone. I knew he would have to get into my phone and i knew he needed the model number so I had planned to set up some simple security to prevent him doing this.

Now the biggest slip, time passed and I never set up the security. He thought I had fallen asleep but I saw him walk over pick up his phone off the table then reach over and grab mine also. I didn't say anything. I thought to myself let's see if he really can do it and also I was liking him a lot at this point and so maybe it wouldn't be so bad. The same as he with his friend.

Well, we had a big falling out. We no longer work together and maybe he feels I got to close to him during our time together. Difficult to go into detail on.

I know he got in. I can give some details on that if anyone's interested. It happened 3 days ago and I've done all I can think to block him from my phone but I will never be 100% sure without some professional help. I wonder even if he has access now also to my laptops or friends laptops.

I have some screenshots from that day from the details log of my gmail. One shows an IP address and another shows what looks like a really long MAC address. Looks like a particular webkit is involved and a popular app. An app that I tried to clear the data from just before I factory reset but every time I tapped the app icon it opened a different app. I was so tired and frustrated at this point I just moved on and did all I knew to do.

What should I do? I wanna feel safe at least.

SkullTraill - April 17, 2021, 3:37 am

Step 1: Get new phone.

Step 2: Change passwords on every single online account you have.

Easy.

Neon™ - April 17, 2021, 3:50 am

" I wonder even if he has access now also to my laptops or friends laptops."

If he had direct(physical) access to your laptop/friends laptops then maybe.

If he had you and/or your friends download something on your laptops then maybe.

Otherwise I doubt it.

If I were you I'd just do a factory reset on my phone, change passwords, set 2FA and ready.

Nate - April 18, 2021, 2:05 am

Check those websites and see if your password has been comprised