Thread: My uncle died from Corona.

kookur - April 23, 2021, 5:10 am

He died at 5:30 am on 16 april, man i lost a family member. He was the type of man who always lived for others and the kindest person I've known. I saw his body wrapped in plastic and then getting burnt.

It was too devastating to watch, corona is so bad and situation has become worse here in India. His wife and kids suffered a great loss and everyone in the family is sad and depressed :(

You watch the cremation in India? Sorry for being ignorant about the customs.

I don't live in the USA and I now live in a country relatively free of Covid 19 due to a fantastic Prime Minister but my great aunt and also my first cousin who was only 50 they both died of Covid 19 back in New York USA where I was born.

So sorry for your loss.

I really wanted to go on a holiday to Asia before Covid 19 happened. I came out of hospital and I actually saved money while in hospital because where I live and the condition I had the government pays for everything and they even gave me free medicine in hospital although I would normally have to pay if I hadn't been in hospital and not buying groceries I got free meals even if they were a bit crap etc... I saved money and my son's school gave us food parcels for the kids while I was in hospital and I was going to go to Singapore or India and then I came out and Covid 19 happened and now I can't go anywhere because it would be stupid because my country is safer.

So sorry about your uncle.

It is so sad, I lost my uncle and aunt within 24 hours, they was so much in love that my uncle just took hes oxygen mask off once my aunt went, he gave up and just wanted to be with her, they was both admitted at the same time with covid, worst thing was the funeral, we had to limit those attending and do it graveside.
