Thread: No More Basketball on Sportsbook?

Mr Monero - April 27, 2021, 3:37 am

Just wondering if anyone knows why there has not been basketball on the HF sportsbook for a little while or if it is just me that has lost it?

Ahh great thanks for letting me know I've been trying to place some bets and usually I could log on first thing in the morning and get them on I'll have a check a little later today!

How is it going with your bets?

Later this day have you had some great game predictions?

I was doing ok but no so much lately, I place them alongside the bookies haha. I usually check rotowire for lineups etc before the game but NBA has been so weird lately, I mean the Knicks were on a 9 win streak! That sums up how crazy the league is right now in a few words!

I had a lot irl on portland to beat pacers yesterday. They honestly could have won by 50+ too. You just gotta wait for the right games. Like for example there is some volatile teams & also some streaks that almost make no sense. Thunder beating Celtics was pretty unexpected but then the Celtics are trashy this year & Tatum was out so not as big a surprise as some woulda thought.

With LeBron being back soon I see the Lakers going on a hot streak towards the end of the season.

Thibodeau is behind that good chemistry on the team and Julius Randle is playing extremely great lately.

With Lebron being back soon I see the Lakers going on a hot streak towards the end of the season. I usually place accumulators but lately been getting screwed by a team or two that shouldn't be losing those games at all, Celtics being one of them and my balance is just dropping daily it's heartbreaking. I'm pretty much zeroed out right now.

I saw Lebron warming up and doing some runs last night so hopefully he's back soon!

Having Derrick Rose over there seems to be doing them wonders too, they're playing real strong lately which is so odd to see from them lmao.

Yeah, accumulators definitely hard to win this year with all the upsets. It's not a normal season at all. Hopefully you get better luck in the playoffs man.

Yeah it's been real tough to judge it for me personally, I'm hoping I can bring my balance back up soon, playoffs should hopefully get me something too. I requested Ball to win rookie of the year at the start of the season and no one wanted to offer me odds on it I'd have came out with soooo much if they weren't such pussies haha.

Well, what's your thoughts on MVP? I have a lot on Jokic but I'm still lowkey paranoid they might give it to Steph so considering covering the bet but logic says Steph has no real shot.

Personally I think if Doncic doesn't win MVP in the next two years it's just pure politics, I feel like people don't like that he came from Europe and dominated the league.

I think being with the Knicks now he will have the freedom to be how LeBron is with the Lakers too. They really need him so they will accommodate him and do whatever they can to get him built back up.

It seems they may be the dark horse of the league next season. ?

I'm a Lakers man though so I think they will still be winning the rings if LeBron is back in time. I'm by no means expect just a heavily opinionated fan haha, but I think it's probably about time the Mavs won especially with how Luka has been playing they do deserve it.

I would still pick either Lakers or Phoenix to win the title this season.

Utah is a good team and can be a real big deal as well.

Nets would definitely the best in the East.

I think it's safe to back Lakers, LeBron needs to get those extra two rings to shut people up with the whole GOAT situation, although he won 4 rings, 3 of which were with a different team everyone always, including MJ defaults to "MJ has 6 rings, he doesn't". That's gotta be pushing BronBron to get those extra two before he retires.

Nets are such a dominant force right now too, I didn't think the Harden signing would work too well because they have three superstars who don't really pass the ball but the coach seems to know how to make it work so fair play to the guy.

In my opinion, nobody can touch the nets. Lakers are good but probably not as good as last year. West could be a bit of a lottery. A lot of good teams. Nuggets without murray might not get far but everybody else can beat each other on any given night. East is a walkover for the nets. They winning games without 2 of their big 3 with consistency. When they have all 3 it's a wrap.

Yeah I agree with that, I wouldn't be surprised in the slightest at all if Nets were in the finals, I might drop a little bit on that thinking about it, didn't Harden drop like a 40+ point triple double without KD and Irving a couple weeks ago?

All of them have won on their own. Joe Harris is Shamet are high quality 3 point shooters. The backup players are a lot better than people think. The big 3 all had so much rest and will be ready to go come the play offs.

Nets a much safer bet than lakers in my opinion. Bucks to me look overrated & Philly always fail in the playoffs. Celtics trash this year. Heat could be dangerous if they get it together but so far been a mess. The rest got no hope. In the west a lot of good evenly matched teams anything can happen.

I have to agree that Nets are looking quite likely, I assume KD is gonna wanna win one more ring before he retires too, who wouldn't so they're gonna push hard, being a Lakers fan I can't say that Nets will win but I will admit they are probably going to be in the finals together and have a finals to remember!

Too many teams are relying on a single superstar rather than building the whole team up, there's too much just pass to the star and let them do their thing, it might fly during regular season but play offs are a different ball game it's pure competition so teams like Bucks and Philly will have a rough time!

I have to say I am enjoying having an actual conversation about basketball too, not many people in the U.K. watch it or if they do they don't really know much about it!

It's getting more popular in the UK due to social media.

Jokic - MVP

I think he's 3/1 right now. Might do. Ball would have won if he didn't get injured but seems disrespectful to give it to him when he missed the last two months especially against the #1 pick who is putting up 20+ a night.

Lamelo definitely should have been #1 pick. Two teams passing up on him is going to be like when 4 teams passed up on luka.

Have you guys watched the Wizard and Mavs game earlier?

For me next year the Wizard got a great future if they will just get a great center for Westbrook and Beal is a great combination for their offense, they just need a legit center that can give them much more threat both in offense and defense.

Yeah they came out of nowhere this season but fair play to them! Like Shaq said on inside the NBA though they're not a proven team so they still have a lot of work to do for us to believe they're actually a contender.

In Luka's case it was literally because he was a European player they didn't think he was shit but this man was professional since like 14, dominating full grown men on the court with Real Madrid at 16, he was better than any talent that came out of the US for a while!

Even Barkley was talking shit about him using the whole European player thing as his argument. He made him regret that though lol.

The league is definitely becoming much more competitive now though with so many stars joining lower level teams, people underestimate the impact that a star has on a whole teams chemistry and ability to teach less experienced players too.

Europeans killing it now. Giannis(technically Greek) Luka, Jokic, Porzingis & a bunch of others all doing pretty good. It's a global game now with streams and social media so NBA is bigger than ever outside of the US & we're beginning to see the results.

Luka annoys me as a player, sometimes he is underwhelming, sometimes he is amazing. I wish he had a slightly better team but the potential is there for him to dominate the league.

Some of the shit he pulls off is unbelievable too though, usually, when he gets fouled, all he has to do is move his hand in some way or another and the ball just auto-locks onto the basket most of the time haha.

I think people in the US do still underestimate European players too though all though it has become more of a global game, the Euroleague has always been competitive though I just don't think people thought it was any good because it hasn't been made into as big of a show as the NBA has

Well Jokic & him & Giannis are probably all in the top 5 best players so it cant be denied anymore. Even Embiid isn't American so the international players taking over a little bit.

For me Steph can work it out for the GSW against the Memphis he just need a little help from Wiggins and Green.

Gordon is a great addition to their team and he is playing really efficient moving around without the ball makes him more on scoring machine.

It takes time for him to gel his game but he got a higher IQ on playing basketball that was makes him special and valuable tag team scoring with Jokic who can pass the ball great for his teammate around the perimeter.

I like them & want them to do well mainly because of Jokic but I don't see them as a threat without Murray. If you remember last year they only beat the Jazz because Murray became a world class player for some games. Gordon is a good addition but they also lost some good squad players. With Murray out they are too reliant on 2-3 players. Outside of that they have almost nothing. They could beat mavs/blazers type level. But in a 7 game series they cant beat the top teams without Murray.

Last year it was only Murray and Jokic are the one who are doing everything with the team but now there are some great shooter like Porter Jr, Campazzo and Austin Rivers and Millsap who can contribute well without Jamal Murray.

Remember Millsap is the missing link last year because of injury but now there were couple of players can provide great offense for the team.

Millsap is not good anymore & Rivers is a nice cover player but really he is not playoff material. I think Nuggets can win a championship if they get 2-3 better role players & keep what they have and get Murray back to his best. Right now they will view it as a success to get to the final of the western conference.

Millsap still got the moves just need to give some playing time. Porter Jr is really making big quality minutes and plays for the Nuggets.

For me they can go up against the Nets in the finals if they will be lucky enough.

In terms of scoring and offense they can go up against Kyrie, KD and Harden and surely they will manage to prevail in the defense.

MPJ is gonna be a dangerous player. He was highly rated as #1 in college before he got a bad injured. Nets would kill them, Nuggets don't have a strong defense at all. But really they are not making it out of western conference. Lakers would easily beat them. Who do they have to handle the size and strength of Lebron & AD? Nobody really. Them vs Blazers is 50/50 but I won't be surprised if it goes 7

Still will go with the Nuggets as my dark horse for the title.

AD and LBJ would be great if they don't have any injury...lately that was the reason why they fall back to 7th place on the West.

Blazers for me is for Dame to prove that he can get the team on much more higher level but if CJ and Melo won't contribute it would be really hard for Dame to carry all the loads for the team.

I watched Blazers a few times they have always be kind to me(betting wise) but they have such poor defense & they do not play as a team. They are reliant on CJ or Dame going crazy by themselves. They really will not worry anybody.

Even before their defense is pretty shit...Melo is can't put some defense on much more faster youngsters than him.

CJ is a scoring machine as well with great hand ball movement but not consistently doing it for the team, only Dame gave it all most of the time.

Melo on the other side always provides quality time providing some offense when needed.

Nurkic has also been a little underwhelming. They have some good talent & should be potentially dangerous but the defense & lack of cohesion just makes them easy pickings for good teams. Dame should leave in my opinion but he is happy to stay there & doesn't want to.
