Thread: Any coinbase alternatives?

Tesseract.mk - May 1, 2021, 7:06 am

I'm having issues with coinbase, their support team sucks and offers absolutely no help. I had an issue buying on my debit card, I think my bank flagged it as a fraudulent payment so I called them and told them it wasn't fraud and that it was me who attempted the payment. Coinbase has now flagged my card, I emailed them about my bank flagging the transaction and that it should be fine now but they just told me again to speak to my bank.

Is there any other exchanges you can deposit via debit cards so I don't have to wait 3 days before I can use the funds?

binance kucoin moonpay kraken... just do a research on what you want to buy or if you want a service without KYC

They have no fees at all? I've been buying my crypto through the crypto.com app since I have no fees for the first 30 days. I believe the fees are high to transfer coins out of my wallet though.

I've always recommended Binance whenever someone asks me the same question, so yeah, Binance, others fees are too high.

Binance I think is the best. I have no problems with them.

Awesome, thanks guys.

I would also recommend Binance.

It's fast, the fees aren't too high and they support many coins.

Can someone tell me the difference between using crypto.com and binance? I've been using Crypto.com app, does Binance just have different coins?
