Thread: ADHD Pills for Studying \(Limitless?\)

OBAMASELF - May 1, 2021, 10:21 pm

Just wondering if any of you guys have tried ADHD pills for studying. Apparently from what I have heard from my mates, it helps you focus more and finish shit fast. There's a movie called Limitless where this guy take this pill and he become more focused and everything becomes super clear, I know the movies are exaggerated but is ADHD pills some sort of weak version of that?

So whats your experience like?

It's like being tired but having energy. Say you're working on something, it's late (you haven't taken a pill in this scenario) you're yawning, wiping your eyes cause you're tearing up from yawning so much, you're slowly notice you're getting more and more distracted. With the pill, you kind of ignore the side effects of being awake whilst being tired, and the ability to focus or put your attention into something is heightened. The whole point of an ADHD pill is to relax you while focusing your mind.

Coffee is less expensive.

theenchantress - May 2, 2021, 12:58 am

I need them pills right effing now.

soulm8 - May 2, 2021, 1:25 am

Its a good thing, but not magical what gonna make something wow and turn someone into super human.

Same is with coffeine, or any supstance with IN at the end.

Even a good tea can help you with focus and staying awake a little longer.

If im not wrong, there are some gingko pills which are good for focus etc

In this world, its called Adderall and it doesn't make you "limitedless", maybe a lil better

Beherit - May 2, 2021, 3:46 am

I watched that movie for the first time a few months ago, and thought the concept was interesting.

Not sure if I'd actually experiment with those kinds of products though.

ADHD meds are great for studying and things of that nature. Although if you overdo it, they can be more detrimental than helpful.

MarvinMalware - May 2, 2021, 8:36 am

If you don't have ADHD, please don't take them. There's no need, and it's just asking to form a habit. I spent years battling addiction against Adderall, I benefitted nothing from that, all it did was fuck my head up slowly over time.

A Nobody - May 2, 2021, 8:46 am

You won't be like limitless but many people do find they study better with it. As others have said, it can be pretty habit forming since it's an amphetamine.

Silkroad - May 2, 2021, 9:03 am

They're called amphetamines and I used them for 5 years when I was in my early 20s to finish school and also write songs and code programs. I got addicted and it took me a while to get off of it since all my friends were taking them as well.

The first times feel pretty much like limitless (at high doses) you feel like you have infinite energy, you are 100% focused on whatever you are doing, your creativity is through the roof and your motivation is unmatched. After you get used to them, you get less euphoria but the energy and focus stay the same.

But remember that it's a drug and that every drug has side effects and bad sides. Your tolerance will go up and you can get easily addicted.

Bit off topic but have you seen the movie Lucy? It's like limitless but even better biscuit deluxe - May 2, 2021, 12:58 pm

In short, they help you stay concentrated and make boring tasks a little less boring.

I wouldn't say they make you finish shit fast, but it may feel like it was fast as it helps you stay focused with your surroundings blurred out.

I know people who take Adderall on a daily basis to focus more on their job. I'm personally against this stuff cuz as much as one thinks it helps them, it can also lead to health issues.

Michael - May 3, 2021, 12:19 am

I think you need to investigate this some more.

There is no pill like they used in the movie Limitless.

The pills that are available for people with ADHD gives you the ability to concentrate more, have more focus, speed up your brain activity, ...

But they are not like you may think as in "I take a pill and I'll be a wonder guy/ girl".

bk randy - May 3, 2021, 9:54 pm

What they were portraying in that movie was the substance Huperzine-A.

Huperzine-A has been banned in use of Television Game shows.

If you really want the closest thing to what that movie is based off of, you would want to take a combination of;

Huperzine-a + Dexedrine or Adderall or Methamphetamine + Modafinil or Adrafinil + Clonidine or Gaunfacine

Keep in mind doing this at a young age will likely cause you to go in to Alzheimer's disease, which can happen even in middle age people.

Huperzine-a by itself is good to take when you have Alzheimer's, that's what I'm saving my use for haha

Also, check out the Vices sub-section under the Personal Life section, which is located under the section The Lounge is in.

i don't think any pills helps in the effectiveness of focus and the limitless is just a fiction story.

SIM-5021590 - May 28, 2021, 3:44 pm

normally you can find a dealer at your universities library there's always someone selling then and popping off.

it helps a lot .. I never took them but had friends take them and they had a GPA of 4.0 and did good in college.

SIM-5024658 - May 28, 2021, 6:39 pm

No, I haven't tried any but I hear from friends that helps then study when in college.

BTC Wizard - May 29, 2021, 12:00 pm

Funny you should say limitless, I say this drug is from that movie all the time. Try "Modafinil" it keeps you wide awake, and super focused. I recommend to people who need to power through work/exams etc. Combine it with coffee or redbull and it will SUPERCHARGE your day.

Perileos - May 29, 2021, 12:14 pm

I tried several of these pills, I tried Methylphenidate (Ritalin/Concerta) & Adderall but none gave me that type of "superpower".

Prettykitty - May 29, 2021, 12:18 pm

I've been put on most of them and I wouldn't recommend it. Gives headaches like 15 cups of black blue mountain coffee or something.

Doctor. - May 29, 2021, 12:35 pm

Don't do that shit my guy just come pay me a visit ;D

blackrose_x0x0 - May 29, 2021, 12:38 pm

Amphetamines are the drug you're asking about as others have already stated.

I really don't recommend Adderall or anything similar if you don't have ADHD and it's not being prescribed to you by your doctor. Why? Amphetamines are addicting! Like really addicting. People who take adderall may tell you it's fine if taken in low doses but everyone responds to drugs differently and you may end up liking it a little too much, this is the trap. It can also lead to health issues, speed is tough on the heart.

I used to be incredibly addicted to meth and would take way too much adderall when I had access to it because I was trying to replicate the meth high... it goes without saying, don't try this.

People take adderall when not prescribed to either get high, use it for focus on tasks or studying, or suppress their appetite to lose weight. Or a combination of those three.

If taken at a reasonable dose though you may feel limitless for a duration while on the drug, especially when new to it.

Doomslayer - May 29, 2021, 1:20 pm

It works wonders in moderation and small doses. Take too much and it will have the opposite effect.

Dredd - May 29, 2021, 2:21 pm

ADHD pills are essentially speed for normal folk. Slows them down speeds us mentally up.
