A good way to make money is to learn a skillset such as marketing, graphic design, coding etc.
Any way that you could solve other peoples problems or provide a useful product/service is a good genuine way to make money my friend.

Or, you know, you could just eWhore and stuff like that (I guess it's still providing a service)

What is it you are doing on Fiver, if you don't mind my asking?

I also wanted to add to my last post - A good recommendation would be try to focus on what you can do best rather than just trying to make money, then try to see where and how you can apply your skillset, what you can provide or what problems you can solve with it. People will pay you for a service, product or something that helps them.

You and I both seem like minded, I might be able to help you in the direction you are trying to go because it sounds similar to mine and I would also be interested to see some of your portfolio/works.
