BTC, ETH, XRP, ADA, DOGE, MATIC, LTC and POLKADOT are my portfolio at the moment. Looking to add maybe BNB. Still contemplating though.

And if you want us to explain why for each and every coin, it's not going to happen in one thread/post. There are multiple reasons for any individual to analyse before making their final decision to invest in any particular crypto currency.

People will give their suggestions/lists to you here. I'd suggest filter the most common ones that are repeated and do your own research on those coins and make your final decision based on that.

just because people said it was bad years ago doesnt mean it will always be bad it can always change. doge is backed by elon. elon has a huge following. look at its market cap now. i used to hate doge too but it isnt how you think it is now.

im not saying to go all in on doge but im saying doge's fundamentals have change because of elon and you have to take that into consideration.

At the minute my portfolio would consist of BTC, ADA, ENJ and XMR. I'm not a trader tho, I'm a long term holder. Can and will wait at least 5-10 years before cashing out. At the age of 35 the plan is to sell, quit the job and move to Thailand to enjoy rest of my days doing nothing ha ha.

IronCoder - May 28, 2021, 4:18 am

If you going to invest alot BTC ETH

If small invest, doge, eth, xmr

Tightarse - May 28, 2021, 4:23 am

BTC 60% store of value, huge investments have already ocured so it won't be going anywhere soon. There is also a limited supply and more people want in...

Radix 30% - future of DEFI see the tread on here.

XMR 5% - cockroach rule, there will always be cockroaches trying to sneak around, this is their pathway and it will only go up as a result.

5% pump coin

The last 5% I only use for the coins you find appealing, but my rule is I have to sell the ones I'm holding to reinvest. Stops me buying heaps of altcoins.

Finally, I don't invest in anything I don't completely understand. Better of spending it in a casino where you at least know your odds.

I'm hedging my bets on PoS coins more than anything right now. While I love Monero and wish it had more main stream attention due to it's true anonymity, I'm not fond of PoW coins as a whole. That said, the list of appealing PoS coins is pretty limited right now.

ETH - Due to the coming transition to PoS in 2.0, combined with ERC, on top of existing mainstream adoption, Eth is my absolute #1. I'd say it's in a prime spot to overtake BTC as the #1 coin in the next 5-10.

ADA - I can't say I have faith that ADA will ever top $10, regardless of how far out we're looking. Honestly, given the $5 is a stretch in and of itself. That said, I like the technology. The founder of ADA is one of the original founders of ETH and the spirit of the coin shows. ADA is targeting different use cases than ETH is, so it's solid diversification.

ALGO - Same as ADA, but a bit less confident in it's mainstream appeal.

MATIC - Marc Cuban is all for it. I'm not normally one to follow the trends of "celebrity" investors, but combined with my expectations for ETH and the way Marc tends to invest, I've got some faith in the project.

..... Did you read what you responded to? I asked what they meant by renting a coin lol.

The idea behind Cardano (ADA) is great, but it will consume much more time than other projects/chains. The developers of Cardano analyze the fails from other projects and do a full research before they implement new features or change the code. But Cardano has potential, that's clear. But you have to be patient, it's long-term.

Did anybody mentioned XLM? Stellar Lumens? It is a great project, too. But very fluctuant at the moment. I try to make all transfers through TRX or XLM because the two chains have nearly zero fees...

My favorites this month are:

XLM

ALGO

PRV (they offer 21% APY for providing liquidity, that's nice!)
