Thread: what is the difference between low and high quality traffic?

realemperrr - May 29, 2021, 3:39 pm

i have been looking around hackforums for some time but i really struggle to understand what is the difference between low and high quality traffic?

if traffic is basically boys adding you on kik/snapchat/etc right?

can somebody please explain what does make traffic go from low to high quality.

Thank you in advance.

What i understand by low or high quality traffic is:

Low quality - traffic from all over the internet where most of the people wants free shit (they think you're a normal person)

High quality - targeted traffic from specific places where people are most likely to buy shit (they are lonely and ready to pay) for example sexting forums

Low quality traffic - people people who want free bobs and vegane pics

High quality traffic - people who are interested in buying/subscribing

I've been around the block with ewhoring and I've heard the quality of traffic described in two different contexts.

The first in relation to buyer to non buyer ratio. Basically however many people willing to buy what you offer out of every 100 or so people you might talk to. High quality traffic has a higher ratio of buyers. I think this is generally what people refer to when they say HQ traffic.

The second is in relation to how easy it is to get a buyer. This one is a little tricky because its not talking about how many people are a buyer but how easy it is to get them to be one. You might have two people and each of them willing to buy something but one was convinced to give a lot in the first few minutes of chatting and the other took significantly longer for less money and might have had more complications during that process. Obviously the cash ready buyer is higher quality traffic.

I feel each is applicable and both are you obviously preferred. It can also be improved if you have the social engineering skills to match.

Sorta common sense, if you don't know the definition between low quality and high quality, good luck social engineering, LOL.

Time and money; Low quality traffic will waste your time for little to no profit- With the right traffic, you'll make profits with little to no effort as high quality clients value their time as well as their girls.
