Thread: What is your proudest accomplishment?

Vectonsid - June 4, 2021, 11:51 am

Mine was building a mid sized computer.

Tell me yours :)

Being able to pay off my family's debt, mainly my mom. Teaching friends and strangers tricks to financial freedom.

Although it's two I feel go well together as one.

Hoping to reach a goal of becoming a multi millionaire in 10 years.

My gundam collection! I'm at the 5 digits now for value of it ?

Beherit - June 6, 2021, 2:55 am

Hitting one of my financial goals this year by myself :D

Does finishing multiple anime in a week count?

Blockonome - June 6, 2021, 3:08 am

Probably making my first real documentary to show the world and in 1 year, it managed to get 160K views, without any kind of advertisement.

That is an amazing accomplishment you got there, it's really happy to see that you cared about your family or your mom's debt.

I white knuckled my way through getting clean and sober. I relapsed a few times trying to get sober but December 10th, 2017 was my day. Been clean ever since.

Correct! buying components and then assembling is such an amazing feeling and huge accomplishment to me as it was my first time doing it.

Finding a 270 carats, blue opal stone by the river side. I was able to help free some young dudes from the jail house and visited hospitals to pay bills for the poor and needy.

First proper program i wrote after teaching myself c# for months, gave me a great sense of accomplishment even though the program was nothing special.

I have come a long ways this past year and I don't feel as confused or misguided like I did a year ago.
