Thread: Has the covid pandemic affected your life?

SpinaBenz - June 12, 2021, 12:01 pm

Good or bad reasons are accepted.

It did in fact changed a few things in my life when it all started.

I'm thankful to say that covid19 has had little, to no impact on my everyday life. I've had to adjust a few things according to new regulations put into place where I live, but beyond that-- nothing.

I feel for people who have been severely impacted, either health wise or financially.

Yea true I hope who has been affected health-wise or financially something good will be there for them in the future.

I know a few people who have been affected. The US has been a total shit show during this whole thing. If anything, we're all somewhat affected in the US just due to the lack of proper management throughout the entire virus and grocery/personal item shortages we've experienced throughout.

In a bad way if you're an anime weeb collector like me. Only shipping option I have from Japan is DHL and it's fucking expensive. Makes me really hate life atm

Yes, limiting work and relations. Honestly sucked but things are better now.

Repeat - June 25, 2021, 2:11 pm

Actually not. The only thing it has affected for me is the ability to travel overseas!

Casp?r - June 25, 2021, 5:49 pm

In terms of my work life no, but socially not being able to see my family, yes it has.

Pretty good for me. Got to not have to talk to delivery drivers, take over supervisor more departments, then use that to jump to a new job.

I had COVID and know several people who died as a direct result of COVID or a result of COVID-related complications with previous ailments. Pretty crazy shit.

was it a good change or a bad change?

Yanix - June 26, 2021, 9:12 pm

Definitely a very big impact on me and my family.

jjbeast09 - June 27, 2021, 12:00 am

Definitely has for me just as it has for pretty much everyone else I assume.

neightworks. - June 27, 2021, 11:32 am

I don't feel like there's anything I must do before I die, but I don't feel like missing out on things.

wiz - June 29, 2021, 5:16 am

Socially bad

Family worse

Work had to shut down my store

Physically, no gym

It was hard beinale70 - June 29, 2021, 9:03 am my work life and my entire personal life destroyed by covid. I curse covid for what it done to all neightworks. - June 29, 2021, 7:27 pm

Made thousands on a game company, spent it all on a new car, had an employee die of covid as well.

Covid was the best thing that ever happened to me.

I had a casual job while starting my business but this casual job is paying way too much ($50/hour). The original plan was to have the casual job while slowly growing my business. That didn't happen though, from making so much at this job I'd lost motivation to put time and effort into my own business. Then covid hit here.

All the casuals got stood down temporarily (2 months) which forced me to really start pushing my business as money was getting tight. After working heaps on the website, SEO and pushing google ads I started getting fantastic results.

My first financial year I did about $25k sales. This year is looking to close out around $170k. (excluding the casual job I still work now)

I truly believe if it wasn't for covid I would have continued being lazy with my business and wouldn't even be close to the position my fiance and I are in now.

EDIT: Should also add none of my friends or family have caught covid, I don't even know anyone who has. Australia's numbers have been extremely low compared to the rest of the world though.
