Thread: You don't "invest" in Bitcoin

only an idea - June 13, 2021, 8:33 pm

I hate when people use the word "invest" when they are talking about buying BTC. I mean technically it's an investment, but if you just have some will power to hold and not sell it to the very people telling you not to buy it, it's not an investment. You are agreeing to be apart of the new world, a better world. Buying Apple or Amazon in the 90's wasn't a sure thing, but BTC is, and let me tell you why I believe that. With the speed that information flows now, with the internet and social media in general, everyone is a lot smarter than they were years ago, people know a whole lot more. Think how this rapid flow has effected politics, they literally relied on big tech censorship to get Biden in office (not my point), think about the whole "Epstein didn't kill himself" thing, I am sure if you polled random people, the general consensus is most people cannot believe that. So the distrust is there, the distrust in the governments, the distrust in fiat currency systems that are nothing but taking their word as bond. $1 is worth $1 because we were born into that, it's all we know (until now).

Everyone's talking about what bullshit we've lived our entire lives in, and most people are getting sick of it. We see the stimulus packages going out, and think, how can they print trillions of dollars out of thin-air, who is in charge of this? They got money for wars, but they can't feed the poor? Enough is enough, for those who have been fortunate to be on this train for a while now, we sort of have an obligation to those who are stuck in the slavery we were all born into, and while that doesn't have to entail giving away money for philanthropic purposes, but to inform those who cannot see clearly, because looking and seeing are two different things, and those people who look at the price right now and think they have missed this golden opportunity, they haven't. Not even close. All I ask, is for you to see, try it. Be aware what is going on, the world is waking up, countries that are known for poverty and inhumane living conditions don't want BTC, they need it. The internet has been stuck in 1994 for a long time now, and "next" year, when Windows 95 comes out, everyone is going to have access to more power than they have ever only dreamed of a year prior. So to me, you're not investing, you're setting yourself up for a brighter future, one where you are in control, one where the only fucking person you have to answer to is yourself. ?

I really don't understand what it is that makes you dislike this. I honestly don't see what your problem is.

Man a little advice is to use paragraphs sometimes. I know its not totally on subject, but how are the BTC fees doing are they still in shambles ?

Proper sentence structure has never been my strong suit, but it's noted moving forward?. They are not totally in shambles, they are really low right now compared to what we've seen recently. Still very high compared to what they should be, but it's moving in the right direction. Also, I just find the word invest when talking about BTC to be a little foolhardy, it implies you have an exit position in mind (which is fine if you're using it to make a quick buck) but those who know what they're doing, see only the potential that BTC has, it's not about making x amount of dollars, it's about being apart of a new world and not being stuck at the bottom of it again and again. Feel free to tell me I am wrong, I am wrong all the time actually about a lot of things, but this is one of the few things I am certain of. Safe surfing brother.

The fees have kept me from using it as payments for a good while now. The final straw was when It seemed to have ruined cashapp, for me anyway.

I have been unable to send anything lower then 56$ dollars after buying it and before the fees went crazy i could easily send as little as under 5 dollars.

I am only more confused as to what is going on with bitcoin after this crap.

If they are fixed now im gonna celebrate !

The fees were outrageous, criminal if they were in traditional payment systems. But moving forward, we are going to be seeing a paradigm shift :)

Yes well while all this was going on, for some reason, everyone was paying crazy fees but I was paying very little fees in cashapp. Everywhere else was way high.

A week later i get a message when trying to send under 56 BTC from my Cashapp and that's where I am now. Last I checked.

Certainly gonna check it out again and see if they are fixed actually !

"I mean technically it's an investment"

Anything you put money into is an investment bro. Whether you get a monetary gain or not isn't the point.

If you were the first human being and it was winter, and you were freezing your ass off, you could say "hey, you might want to invest in making a fire so you don't die", kind of the same with BTC.

A Nobody - June 14, 2021, 4:38 am

Nah, you're wrong. I invest in BTC.

Somehow I doubt that since you're too stupid to understand what investments are.

Edit: Lmfao yikes - OP told me to kill myself because of this comment.

Thank you for noticing my username. Perhaps you should consider growing up and learning to control your temper? Might be better than sending hateful pm's and telling people to kill themselves.

Talking how you'll buy someone's family, what are you 13 years old? C'mon that's really immature.

You said you're setting yourself up for a bright future. Yeah, it's called investing in your future. I'm not quite sure what point you're trying to get across here.

Personally, I'm all for investing in BTC. Simple as that.

You're just trying to argue semantics here and failing at it.

Okay again explain how this isn't an investment.

An investment is something you invest in for a reward.

You invest in making a fire, the reward is you don't fucking die.

Go back to school idiot.

I invest in Bitcoin.

The SoV and tech side of it is cool and all but in the end I put my money in to get a return, and some would call that an iNvEstMenT.

You invest because you believe and you believe because you invest.

peldon - June 15, 2021, 2:51 pm

Making money now and you're setting yourself up for a new future

CollectingTime - June 16, 2021, 8:06 am

Investing in Bitcoin is investing in the future.
