Thread: Volunteer clothing?

Finally, the moment I've been waiting for during the past 2 years.... got my volunteer uniform!

Regardless of so many different views on whether the Olympics should happen or not, I have to say, getting a full clothing set (not sure if I can write exact details yet as I haven't finished reading the ToS) feels nice, less things to buy for summer ?

Now I'm actually wondering, how many others use clothes they get at volunteer or other events as your everyday clothing??

P.S: according to the prepaid card they issued to me, my new name is "FIELD CAST" and no idea why it's all capitalized... too bad it's only valid till the end of this year.

What role do you have at the olympics? None the less, pretty cool.

This is pretty cool. Best of luck with your volunteering gig. Do share some of the stories later on with us about your experience.

There might be some more to do, but nothing in concrete details yet, training is supposedly 1 week before the games.

are the cases on the decline and how is the vaccination percentage atm?

What do you mean by volunteer clothing? Is it like a jump suit or something, or like Dickies?

Far as I know, only 65yo+ have been vaccinated, at least in my area I can't reserve my vaccination dates yet.

Clothing provided to volunteers at events, I got a whole set of shoes, socks, pants (transformable to shorts), shirt, jacket, mask, hat, and a reusable water bottle.

It really depends on the event, sometimes they give other items like pens or notebooks.

I actually have a notebook of GlobalGameJam2018, and NASA Space App competition T-Shirt (probably 2018 as well, can't remember).
