Thread: FNAF Creator cancelled after caught donating to Right-Wing Politicians

ghostboy - June 17, 2021, 9:42 am

Quote: Scott Cawthon has announced that he is retiring, and will no longer work on the popular Five Nights at Freddy's games, a series he began seven years ago.

Earlier this month it was revealed that Cawthon had donated significant amounts of money to conservative action committees and politicians, including Donald Trump. Many fans of the FNAF games are members of the LGBTQ+ community, and they reacted negatively to the news, which led to Cawthon announcing at the time "that's something that I won't apologize for."

Imagine being cancelled by your own fanbase/community over Identity Politics. This is just crazy Lol.

And if I remember correctly didn't Donald Trump's Administration work towards decriminalizing homosexuality across the globe? I don't understand why the LGBT community hate him so much.

The left: "We believe in and fight for freedom of speech"

The left: "I don't agree with you, so I'll cancel you"

Here's a bunch of fundamentalist loons praising Trump for spending his entire Presidency pushing for "religious freedom" to discriminate.

One thing they cite is a case of a baker refusing to bake a cake for a gay couple's wedding because of his religious beliefs (this man happened to be a devout Christian). No one should be forced to do something that goes against their religious beliefs.

OT: Cancel culture is a cancer. Once they start "canceling" you, they're going to call you a racist/sexist/homophobic bigot whether you kiss their asses or not. The worst thing you can do is apologize for something that almost certainly was either a simple joke or wasn't even done with bad intentions.

We have population of rebellious idiots jumping on the social media bandwagon. They will find every way to be different, special, or find a problem in something somewhere. The dumber of the population has a larger platform to speak on than before. Basically kids running around without parents executing every bright idea that pops up in their brain with little knowledge/thought.
