Any reason why you're a relatively inactive account with very few threads offering a crypto management service with a starting balance of $10,000? Seems very very sus.

I suggest you lower the starting balance and/or prove your credibility for weeks/months before offering something like this.

Tbh people do have lives outside HF too and being inactive doesn't mean anything at all

Also, the money is in your control btw. It stays in your account, not mines. All I do is offer the API, that will trade on your behalf. The withdrawals you will be in control yourself and before I even make money, you would have to make money yourself 1st.

So yes it would be sus, if I just randomly asked you to send the $10k to myself or something. But it's not sus when you already have control of your own money and it's costing you nothing upfront. Infact, it's the other way around. You would need to make money 1st, then you would send my share of my profits which would be 60% of the profits weekly/bi-weekly/monthly depending on trade frequency.

Also, following your suggestion I dropped the min investment to $5k for now but will increase later as people join
