Thread: Magnet Fishing

iNviZ - July 5, 2021, 4:25 pm

Anyone ever try it out? I bought a few fishing magnets, curious to see what I find off some bridges in the bad parts of town.

Deany - July 5, 2021, 4:31 pm

(Jul 5, 2021 04:30 PM)Stephen Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I personally haven't tried it, used to spend a few hours a day watching people magnet fishing when I had Facebook.

The stuff they pulled out was interesting:

Guns

Knives

Mopeds

Safes

Bank Vaults

If you get some catches would love to see the finds.

This. I've watched countless amount of magnet fishing vids on YT myself lol.

I'd be down to try it personally, too. Sounds like fun.

Demize - July 5, 2021, 4:40 pm

Never really heard of anyone trying it, but now you got me thinking i might have to give it a shot

You can get some nice fishing magnets for under 30.00 on Amazon. I can't believe how strong these things are.

I have a thing for odd shit, i have some super bright flashlights i bought that shine up to 300 yards for no reason other than to fuck around with, so i shall add some ridiculously strong magnets to my collection also

Lorem Ipsum - July 5, 2021, 5:09 pm

Yes, as a kid / teen with my dad. It was fun and stuff, but it was for a short while.

We both didn't like it as much as we thought it would be. But hey, it was an experience!

I buy odd shit as well. Sometimes they sit for years before I use them. Or sometimes I come across them and think oh damn I forgot I bought this.

XxXxXxXxX - July 5, 2021, 5:17 pm

I have never tried it, but I have seen some related videos. The question I have is if the magnet goes to an ascetically large or heavy object that cannot be moved, what happens? Do you just cut the rope and lose it?

Same my girlfriend hates it she was grilling me for buying those flashlights and then i needed it one day and i never let her hear the end of it now

A Nobody - July 5, 2021, 5:32 pm

I'd be down for trying this out.

Dan - July 5, 2021, 5:49 pm

I haven't tried it personally, but I've been watching a few YouTube videos on it. Amazing what some people are finding!

Really interesting.

bk randy - July 5, 2021, 6:16 pm

Yeah, you need one of those hooks on a rope to be able to pull out the heavy stuff that really makes you curious though..

Awesome little hobby forsure, people don't normally find much though just sayin, it is fun to saw WHAT you can get..

Lilith - July 5, 2021, 7:08 pm

I was entirely unaware there was a term for this and I was sitting here baffled that you could catch fish with magnets.

I'm under the impression that most treasures stop being treasures once they're in the water long enough. Coins being one of the few exceptions.

Prepper - July 5, 2021, 7:43 pm

I want to start magnet fishing, I live in an area with very old bridges and and man made lakes. I also live near old covered bridges.

Are you planning on eating, or just catch and release
Curious

Mix - July 5, 2021, 9:15 pm

I personally have never tried it, but back along, I say back along I believe it was when covid first hit, I was obsessed with watching people on youtube and Facebook do it. Some of them were very fake but others were very much real and I really was shocked by what some of them found. Now that I found this thread it has reminded me of how good they were to watch.

i have seen some ppls on the youtubes doing this, pretty fun and addicting (you never know what your gonna find!)

In my country they find guns and grenades all the time, (some related to ww2)

That's very possible, really with blue gill or perch, guessing you were reeling or making some movement out of the line/hook?

They would feed pretty close to the shore and there was always a boat tied up to a post back then.
So we would get on the boat (leaving it tied to the post) and float above them, then drop in a line and hook and just jingle it around a bit. No idea what sort of fish it was, a flatter (thin) fish with spikes on their back that hurt pretty bad if you got pricked by one.

Nah, I don't fish at all anymore. Don't even have a license to do it right now. I wanna go fishing but I

It's banned in a lot of places here in the Netherlands, mainly due to weaponry being in the canals and stuff that can explode and damage the infrastructure. It's interesting to see what people always fish up, though.

Honestly, I have no clue. It's not like a general ban, it's allowed in some places. But there's often old WWII ammo still in some places, which if explode, can really damage the infra.
