

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Remove post restriction in the Currency Exchange section

Facewipe - July 9, 2021, 3:06 pm

Hello everybody,

I have seen that in the Currency Exchange section only Ub3r and V3ndor members can create new threads. I suggest you to move that restriction.

The restriction should be carefully considered/should be reconsidered.

If you want to have a lot of crypto converted into cash, then it makes sense to use multis and trade in several batches with several people in order to not unnecessarily endanger yourself, as receiving cash is associated with risk, as black money directly affects real life meets. A complicated apply process (V3ndor) would only make everything more complicated than it already is, meanwhile one lays further traces with the payment of the membership (Ub3r, L33t).

If, for example, you have virtual credit for 9K GBP and want to exchange it for BTC, then you never appear in real life anyway, more or less a fixed profile with a history could help.

Regards and thanks

xCrue - July 9, 2021, 3:12 pm

So why do you need the ability to create threads to accomplish this? You can simply contact those trusted sellers who can create threads. You do not need an upgrade to make contracts?

webdev77 - July 9, 2021, 3:42 pm

HF is not here to protect you. All deals are at your own risk. It is intentionally more difficult to engage in what are already very risky deals.

This restriction isn't going to be lifted.