Thread: How do you get customers to send payments into a male email/acc?

GEKSINO - July 11, 2021, 5:56 am

Heyy, I just dont wanna get limited so im asking how can I get customers sending money to my real-name payment processor account?

Thanks in advance.

You can try to use a secondary account from which you transfer the main one. Good luck!

Yeah forgot to say that I already tried it and it is the best way to waste money by getting it limited.

You can tell them that it's a male relative's account. Or your "manager's" account.

Or you can go further and tell them that you use a male name for your accounts to keep from getting banned and to keep anyone from finding out that you do what you're doing.

Either way, the more detailed the story, the better chance that they will believe it because no one would ever waste time creating a complicated excuse for something.

From my experience I learned a few things. Are you tired of limited secondary accounts? The solution is simple, buy a shit phone for $ 40, restart it from the factory, create a gmail, create a paypal and I guarantee that in 60-70% of cases, paypal will keep up to $ 1000-2500 without limitations. (I think, at 2000 or 2500 with an unverified account it makes you do the first check, I don't know exactly if 2000 or 2500). If for some reason the account becomes limited (eg too many chargebacks), restart the phone from the factory and repeat the process. I recommend you to use different IPs when u create the account, after u can use hotspot or whatever you use (from a mall, store, etc.)

Say it's your brothers/boyfriends/friends account because yours got banned

If using a real girl after you verify it doesnt really matter what email you provide them. If not, ask for a lesser used payment option like applepay. When asked for Paypal instead give them a "friends" paypal. Never scam, thanks
