You have to consider the fact that Zeus doesn't have a strong immune system like you or I; fetal alcohol syndrome really fricks people up, Demize.

I could just edit it like a normal person!

Lets wait for your result,be safe take exceptional care and all the best to you blackrose_x0x0 - August 4, 2021, 8:57 am

When my sister had Covid last year her biggest two symptoms in the beginning were the lack of taste and smell.

Anyways, hope your results come back quickly and you start feeling better soon my man!

I had similar symptoms to you, however I only lost the smell and taste as soon as the other physical symptoms started to go away. You're gonna be fine by the looks of it, good luck :)

Smell will take a while to get back and the taste will recover in a week or two. Take some menthol and steam and youll get well quick.

You'll beat it my friend, I tested positive on the 2nd of August and today I've done a lateral flow (home test for those non UK) and it's come back negative.

You'll experience some days better than others, like some days you'll be able to drink 2l of water and feel like running a marathon and others you'll be struggling to lift a small bottle of water.

I think the worst thing is the isolation, for me personally. I should be out in 2 days but my girlfriend tested positive 2 days after me, meaning 12 days of isolation rather than 10.
