Has anyone played Team Fight Tactics?

Wondering if we have any active players on here, what your favorite champ is, what comp you love to run?

Favorite for me is Yasuo as he is a LP printer! Usually run it with nightbringers opposed to legionnaire!

I've been playing since it came out, super fun game for sure. The only issue is the balancing - it's really poorly balanced, in terms of certain comps remaining too strong for a long period of time (typical of a Riot owned game).

So because of that i typically just play for a bit around release, get up to diamond to maintain my elo, then stop. Haven't played in a month or so, but hyper roll is definitely super fun atm since it's low stress/pressure.

I've always been a draven fan, ever since the early sets. Was really hyped to see him in this current set, although a bit annoyed that they didn't really change him at all from previous sets.

From previous sets, fav champ was definitely shaco or lucian.

I haven't played a ton of hyper roll but do like the low stress factor of it, I sit at around diamond 1 and kind of play here and there but don't go to crazy!

Yeha for sure, i don't understand how people like soju and them play high elo TFT. It's way too different than other ranked games, even autochess is really different.

There's a reason everybody blames RNG when they lose in tft lol. I can hardly stand getting back up to d4/d3 every season. Definitely fun to just play for fun in some hyperroll though, you should definitely give it a shot.

I find myself able to climb a little more each set, the hard part for me is trying to see my end board mid games so the transition is possible, the earlier you can see your end board or know what it will be the easier top 4 is, to me anyhow
