Alright, but what keeps a user from lying about the use-case?
These are residential proxies right? You can use them anywhere anyways?

If an end-user wants to work long-term with us, then lying would not in their best interests as well.
We can detect malicious usage, and we often maintain the reputation of our IPs for all of our customers alike.

Yes, these are residential proxies.

So it's the same pool as you said as he was having many problems with his pool + all his customers where complaining so on that point i cannot do business with Legend Proxies which = proxies.tv as his network is unreliable and servers shut down about 5 times a month can't have all my customers complaining again :)

In a way it isn't. I directly maintain the pool myself, monitor uptime and have confirmed its functionality on various targets.

In any case, I'm offering limited trials for evaluating newer use-cases and only signing on select client accordingly.

I extend my condolences for your bad experience with an unrelated and older service. Thanks for the input.

That would depend upon your request size.

For example, if you are running a request with a size of 1MB to 500 IP addresses from our pool, based on a city, it would approximately use up 500MB~ of data.

You pay for bandwidth, and you can access the network for as long as the bandwidth package lasts.

They're unblocked on CashApp.

The uptime of a single device on our network is generally stable. The $140 contract provides you with 20 GB of bandwidth against our network.

If you need a semi-static residential VPN solution (similar to Luxsocks), then we can provide that too.

You have a variety of options from our API/subnet. You could generate a static list with 100,000+ proxy sessions or use a dynamic endpoint (rotate on every connect). In addition to that, you can call by country, state, city, ISP, generate timed sessions and recall IPs used in the past too.

Any other questions?

If you had a better look at the thread design, you'd notice that it says 3.2m IPs, which is what I tell customers when they ask regarding pool size. Devices in residential networks tend to be accumulated over time, with old devices going offline temporarily and sometimes new devices kicking in on the regular. So there's a constant influx and outflow of devices in almost every residential network including larger ones like Oxylabs. The only difference is that they don't offer any end-user friendly unlimited bandwidth plans like I do, because I have direct pool ownership and distribution, which most of the proxy services on the market do not offer.

As for doubts about pool size and technical specifications, I believe that every customer is free to ask questions regarding the service prior to purchase, which is what I clarified with BikerDude. I don't need to mention twice that these numbers are true, my customers and I who have been using the pool to run upwards of a few million rate-limiting tasks automatically know that it is. It seems that you're the only one who had a bit of a problem reading my thread design.

The Sanity - October 13, 2021, 10:38 am

What type of residential proxies are these? Are they home based IPs, mobile / LTE IPs, or what exactly?

Also, what's the default configuration for the proxy access? Is it a large list of IP:Ports which can be rotated on a specific timer? With the ability to select GEO across this ports list?

I am wondering if you can provide some details about what it looks like in the backend, what do we have access to actually control & configure, perhaps a few screenshots of what the panel looks like? If you could PM this to me that'd be great. I'm looking at possibly getting the $1k/mo plan.

They're mostly mobile (4G/LTE) devices, hence the IP pool is refreshed naturally within a reasonable amount of time.

You get access to the subnet & usage commands, you can define rotation intervals (time-based static, static/sticky sessions or dynamic/on-Connect) and further enhance selection preference with calling by country, city, state, or ISP, .

Upon a purchase commitment, you have access to our subnet/API usage cases, usage tracker, and proxy string generator.

I can show more information to you via a PM, for sure. We'll evaluate your use-case and issue you a trial package (upto 500MB-1GB) so you can test it out on your purposes.

Hi there, missed that question, however any information pertaining to currently online or total active devices/IPs in our pool are only disclosed with customers we have commitments with or have white-listed API access.

We also offer them the IP recall function (to call-back IP addresses used by them in the past specifically).

The 3.2m stat is the entire pool data, not all of those devices are online 24x7, however you easily have access to millions of IPs (1.5-2~) from 100+ countries at any given time.

Sure, just pass me a direct message with your use-case and I'll authorize it accordingly if you wanted to have a look at it.

(Oct 25, 2021 05:38 AM)gadsaccounts Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Do you also provide static residential ones? Yes, we're able to provide static sessions (timed if required), however this will depend upon the proxy life on the network (eg. as a majority of our devices are mobile in nature, they constantly refresh gradually over time)

If you need a 100% static IP, we're able to get you forced semi-static IPs (IPs retained till device is within our network) under a VPN plan.

Mass mailing isn't allowed if that's what you were asking. The proxies can be used to access mail providers like Gmail, Yahoo, AOL, web.de but we do not provide access to other ports than what's required for HTTP traffic/communication.

You can set timed sessions and permanent sessions (until the IP is in stock), however no bandwidth limits yet.

You could opt for a reseller plan/pricing and create subusers with limits.

We're a different service than IPRoyal. We offer better quality 4G/LTE proxies.

Yes, it's suitable for sneaker botting amongst other purposes. I've extensively tested it on several websites and can confirm.

Yes, viewbotting is an acceptable use-case and it has been tested on Twitch as well.

"Data retention for bandwidth-based plans is allowed for a 60-day period. Unlimited plans lapse within a 30-day period by default."

Do you mean when I buy the $1k unlimited bandwidth plan, it simply expires after 1 month and I'll have to buy it again if I want to continue? English isn't my native language so just wanted to be 100% clear about it hence asking the question!

Stanley - December 2, 2022, 11:40 pm

I'm Stanley HF's helper bot. This OP (original poster) of this thread wants everyone to see this page and has elected to bump it to the top of the showthread listing. Since HF doesn't want a ton of LQP (Low Quality Posts) this is the best method of bumping your content. There is a small ?yte fee for each bump. Any OP can bump any of their threads on HF from the linked icon on the top of their first post.

If you haven't already read the first post of this thread we encourage you to do so.

Thanks,
Stanley
